STREET CAR CRASHES INTO FIRE TRUCK

COL. "BILL" GREENE REPORTED KILLED IN RIOTS AT HIS MINES

200 AMERICANS AND MEXICANS DEAD, AND GOVERNOR OF SONORA ASKS U. S. AID.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 2.—A special from Bisbee, Ari., says that Colonel W. C. Greene, president of the Cananea Consolidated Copper Company, was killed by Mexicans at Cananea last night.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The State Department has received direct application from the Governor of the State of Sonora, Mex., for help from the American side, a most extraordinary occurrence.

Dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN from New York with reference to the race war at the mines of Colonel William C. Greene at Cananea, Mexico, where, it is declared, the dead Mexicans and Americans number nearly 200, declare that the whole trouble is the work of Boston stock jobbers, who wish to bear the Greene stocks.

Grave international trouble may result because of the fighting, and Secretary of State Root has wired Ambassador Thompson at Mexico City to ask the Mexican government for proper protection for American citizens at the trouble point.

Arizona Rangers on the Way.

A squad of cavalry, known as the Arizona Rangers, under command of Captain Tom Rynning, formerly of Roosevelt's Rough Riders, started early to-day for the scene of the trouble.

A dispatch from Bisbee, Arizona, says that Major Watts, commander at Fort Huachuca, left there with a squad ron of cavalry for the scene of the fight.

24 NOW DEAD, 90 INJURED BY BOMB FOR KING

Four More Fatalities and Thirty More Wounded Reported To-day.

MADRID, June 2.—Four more deaths occurred to-day of victims of the outrage and thirty additional injured persons reported themselves to the authorities.

The report that General Weyler was injured in the explosion is not true. It was the General's son, Lieutenant Weyler, a cavalry officer, who was injured. A fragment of the bomb struck him in the leg inflicting a bad wound.

It is expected that Robert Hamilton, the Englishman taken into custody yesterday, will be released this afternoon. Hamilton is regarded by the authorities as an eccentric fellow, but they are convinced now that he was not in any way concerned in the plot.

The search for the bomb thrower is being prosecuted diligently. The latest theory of the police is that the plot against King Alfonso was hatched in Marseilles, and Manuel Morales is regarded as the actual assassin. He is the man who was first reported to the officials by the name of Dureau.

Morales, it has developed, is the son of a rich manufacturer living at Sabadell, near Barcelona. His father expelled him from home because of the young man's depravity and anarchistic opinions. Morales was well educated, having a knowledge of chemistry and several languages, and he was able to support himself at Barcelona for a long time as a teacher of languages and the piano.

He left Barcelona for Madrid on May 22. His picture was seized in his rooms and the police hope to be able to catch him, since they now have this means of identifying him. The minister of home affairs has offered to give a personal reward for his capture.

The people of the city have not fully recovered from their fright following the bomb throwing. The fear that there may be other outrages is keeping many persons from taking part in the festivities planned to celebrate the royal marriage.

Under Constant Eye of Prison Guard, Death WATCH ON TUCKER

Condemned Slayer of Mabel Page Visited by Chaplain of Charlestown.

Under the constant eye of a death watch, Charles Louis Tucker is to-day in a death cell in the Charlestown Prison within a few feet of the electric chair in which, if Governor Guild does not interfere, he will meet his death probably a week from Monday morning.

Tucker may do practically as he pleases in the death cell. He is not amenable to the rules that regulate the other prisoners. He may eat anything he likes, smoke, read and sleep as much as he desires. But he can never for a single minute look away from the watchful eye of the guard that sits at the door of the cell.

The death watch to-day is Deputy John E. Proctor, who relieved Deputy Daniel McMillin at 8 o'clock to-day. It was said to-day that Tucker appeared wonderfully cheerful under the circumstances.

Visited by Chaplain.

Prison Chaplain Rev. John W. F. Barnes, accompanied by Deputy Warden Nathan B. Allen, visited Tucker in his death cell at 11:15 to-day. They were the first with the young man for about five minutes.

"Good morning, Tucker, my name is Barnes," said the chaplain. "I come to you as a regular part of my duties. If there is anything that I can do for you send for me at any time."

"I thank you for coming to see me, chaplain," responded Tucker. "If at any time I need you I will be sure to call for you."

Some conversation followed. During the talk Tucker seemed to be bearing himself very hopefully. His courage has not deserted him and his spirits were very good.

The stoicism of the condemned young man has amazed Warden Bridgen and the guards of the prison. Deputy Daniel McMillin was the death guard on duty through the night. He never left the big steel cell. He declared to-day that the young man convicted of the murder of Mabel Page slept without a moan or a restless movement until long after the other prisoners were up and had their breakfast.

Tucker has not yet given serious consideration to the probability that he will be executed, according to the Rev. Thomas W. Bishop, who has been selected as his spiritual adviser. The young man's mind is fixed firmly upon the outcome of the hearing before the Governor on Tuesday. He has pinned his faith on the Governor. He will not give up until his doom is pronounced by the Governor's lips.

DISAPPOINTMENT TO COUNSEL.

The governor's decision not to allow any person to be called at the hearing on Tucker's counsel unless he or she is able to present evidence that is new and that no one except counsel may make a plea for executive clemency, is a distinct disappointment to the lawyers who have been fighting for the young man's life.

This decision of the Governor has led those who have followed the case closely to the belief that His Excellency does not intend to allow sentiment to interfere with the case. The belief narrows itself down to this: If there is new evidence Judge Sheldon and Sherman think would have resulted in a different verdict, the Governor will commute the sentence. If not, many of the friends of Tucker see no further hope.

In speaking of Tucker, Warden Bridges said to-day:

"Tucker is a wonderful man. How he can stand up under the strain I would not attempt to say. He does not show any signs of breaking down since his arrival at the prison. In fact, if he should break down I could not tell the newspapers.

"He is under my care, and I shall watch and guard him as closely as possible. I do not consider it right for me to make public every movement he makes. Supposing he did break down and weep; is that any reason why it should be told the public? Are there many people in the shadow of death that can feel happy?

Change Deprives Tucker of Pleasure.

AT EAST CAMBRIDGE JAIL.

Received visitors in Sheriff's office and was allowed to talk an hour at a time privately. No iron bars shut him off.

Enjoyed recreation in the jail yard with other prisoners, and could converse with them.

Could look out of his cell window over the jail yard, and the sunshine poured into his cell.

The walls of the cell were decorated with keepsakes received from many friends, and the cell was neatly furnished.

IN CHARLESTOWN PRISON.

Only intimate friends, counsel and spiritual adviser can see him.

Iron bars will prevent anyone reaching the prisoner.

Will have no recreation except what he can get in the narrow confines of his cell.

Can neither see nor converse with other prisoners in the place.

Will not see the light of day.

The death house is artificially lighted day and night.

Death watch stands guard night and day.

"While Tucker is in the death cell he can have all the liberties consistent with the law. He may order what he wishes to eat. If he wants steaks he can have them. If he wants turkey he can also have that. He can sleep all he wishes, and have all the good reading matter he wants. He can go to bed when he wants and get up at any time that suits him.

No Gifts from Friends.

"He does not have to live on prison fare and the rules which apply to prisoners serving a sentence does not apply to him. I shall do all in my power to make his stay here as pleasant as can be expected. If he wishes to smoke he can do that all he wishes.

"There is one thing which he cannot do—receive anything from friends. What ever he is given in the way of food and smoking material will have to be furnished through me."

Tucker reached the prison shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday.

After a short walk and almost by intuition it seemed that Tucker knew where the cell was, for he stopped directly in front of the open door. If was here he displayed the only agitation of the trip. When he turned to Sheriff Fairbairn his voice was husky and there were tears in his eyes.

"Good-bye, Mr. Fairbairn," was all he said. They shook hands and parted, the door clanging as it swung shut and the heavy bolts clicking as they barred the prisoner.

Almost as the bolts shot into place Deputy McMillin, who has been Tucker's guard at the East Cambridge jail, took his place in front of the cell, and the death watch was on.

THREW HIMSELF ON COT.

There was nothing left for Tucker to do. He could speak to the guard, for he has known him for two years, but he said nothing. At first he sat in his chair, and then, taking a drink of water, he lay on his cot. He had been given his supper at the East Cambridge jail.

Tucker will now find things changed. The rules of the State prison regarding condemned murderers are rigid. No contact with visitors is permitted, lest prohibited articles be given the prisoner.

The intimacy that has marked his two years in the East Cambridge Jail will now be denied Tucker. When on Wednesday last Mrs. Tucker visited her son at the East Cambridge jail, she kissed him for the last time. She may call upon him at the State prison, but their greetings and conversation will be in the presence of the guard.

When they part, both will find that the small hole in the cell door will not permit them to kiss each other good-bye. The hole is no small and deep that four inches of iron will separate them. The rules of the prison are as iron-clad as the cell itself, and even her reunion to the prisoner will not induce the guard to open the door.

44 DIE IN WEEK OF PNEUMONIA

That pneumonia is prevalent in Boston with remarkable severity is shown in the weekly bulletin of the Board of Health, the total number of deaths from this cause during the week just ended being forty-four, against only thirteen for the corresponding week last year. Pneumonia seems to be largely responsible for the increase in deaths to 240 from 200 reported the same week a year ago.

Children have been especially troubled, seventy-five deaths of children under five years of age having been reported for the week, and of this number fifty-one were under one year old. In the corresponding week of 1905 thirty-seven deaths of children under five years were reported, and twenty-six of children under one year.

DOCTORS AT 31ST SESSION

The second day's session of the thirty-first annual meeting of the American Academy of Medicine at the Hotel Brunswick was opened to-day with a meeting of the council and an executive session.

Following the session of the council there was an open discussion of the report on required qualifications, and some scholastic irregularities growing there from.

Luncheon was served at 1.

There will be an open session at 8 p. m. after which the meeting will be adjourned until Monday.

Eight People Injured in Collision on Washington Street, and Great Crowd of Shoppers Thrown Into Semi-Panic by Accident.

Eight people were injured as a result of a trolley car crashing into Ladder Company No. 3's apparatus at Washington and Pleasant streets this afternoon.

The car, outward bound on Washington street, was speeding along, while the ladder company, responding to an alarm, swung across Washington street at Broadway.

The car caught the fire apparatus half-way, throwing every fireman from the truck and felling the horses to the ground. Lieutenant J. F. Rayn, who was standing on the side of the truck struck by the car, fell between the fender of the car and the rear wheel of the truck. His arm was crushed.

Washington street in the vicinity of the accident was crowded at the time. Storekeepers rushed out to give assistance and several women were carried from the car into shops and revived.

Those injured were as follows:

Higginson, Mrs. Ella A., shrchester, shoulder injured.

Miles, Mrs. C. A., East Boston, shoulder injured.

Richards, Mrs. J. A., Ottawa street, Roxbury, shock.

Winslow, Mrs. Chas. No. 236 Columbus avenue, shock.

Sprague, W. S., Lowell, head injured.

Ademdroth, Mrs. Augusta, No. 146 Leverett street, badly bruised, knocked unconscious.

Ryan, Lieutenant J. F., ladder 3, shoulder crushed, bruised.

Hill, Mrs. Mary E., No. 147 Main street, Charlestown, shock.

All of the injured were sent home in carriages, after being attended in stores.

New Motorman on Duty.

The street car was bound to Dudley street on Washington. The motorman was No. 1253 and the conductor No. 1828. The motorman was new, making his second trip, and when several men waved to him at Warrenton street to stop the car he paid no attention, there being no white post at this corner. There is a down grade at the point and the car was going at a good rate.

Broadway is almost a continuance of Pleasant street, as it crosses Washington. The big fire truck came from its house on Harrison avenue, down Broadway, and Driver John Gargigan intended to cross Washington street into Pleasant on his way to Tremont street.

The car contained forty-five people, many of whom were women. On the front seat were five men, who jumped as they saw that the collision could not be averted. The motorman used by his brake and made every effort to stop his car. The force of the collision threw him from his feet onto the seat. He was unhurt, except for a slight shaking up.

On the track besides the driver were Lieutenant J. Ryan, Captain Peter Walsh and Ladderman Waggett, Macdaffan and J. F. Malone. They were all thrown from the truck. Lieutenant Ryan was most seriously injured, being caught between the car and the truck. His arm and shoulder were badly crushed, and he was cut and scratched.

Makes Off With Purse.

Mrs. Augusta Ademdroth of No. 146 Leverett street, was on the second seat. The force of the contract threw her to the pavement. She was picked up unconscious and carried into a store, where she was revived. Mrs. Ademdroth carried a pocketbook containing fifteen dollars, and as she fell some man grabbed the purse and made off through the crowd. Nobody gave chase and the man got away.

The other women injured were thrown from their seats on to the floor of the car. Mrs. Ella A. Higginson and Mrs. C. A. Miles, who were sitting on the ends of the third and fourth seats, were thrown against the uprights and their shoulders were injured.

The front of the car was smashed. The fender was broken into small pieces, and the glass in the ventilators was smashed, but no one was cut. The force of the collision threw the car from the tracks and turned it half over. Several of the ladders on the truck were broken up.

PLOT TO KILL PRESIDENT

PORTLAND, Ore., June 2.—As the result of the arrest of a Pole here for an assault on several Russians, local detectives have learned of the existence here of a large body of Russian Nihilists, who, it is alleged, have been plotting the assassination of President Roosevelt, simply awaiting the accumulation of sufficient funds before sending a delegation to Washington to carry out the scheme.

Friends of the Pole informed the police of the doings of the Nihilistic group.

POLICE TRAP FUGITIVE GIRL

NEWTON, June 2.—Arrested this morning after two days' of liberty, Celia Mahoney, the nineteen-year-old girl who escaped from the Waltham Police Station Thursday, was sentenced to the Sherborn Reformatory. The girl was found at her room at No. 148 Sutton street, which place the police were watching in the belief that she would return to it. She was charged with stealing goods from Margaret Larkins of No. 23 Maple street. Her case was continued from Thursday until to-day. Shortly afterwards, she escaped from the corridor of the Waltham station.

200 Americans and Mexicans Killed in Strike Riots

REPORT COL. 'BILL' GREENE SLAIN

RACE WAR AT HIS MINES AT CANANEA IS DECLARED TO BE RESULT OF STOCK-JOBBING.

ing. He aided for ratification of his action to Secretary Taft, and a message was sent recalling him. It is not known whether or not the message of recall reached him.

At the New York office of Greene little had been heard from the scene of the conflict. Greene's friends say that the miners, both Americans and Mexicans, own a bit of stock in the mines. There is constant petty bickering over their wages in the process, and it is said that had it a pay day comes but that some quarrels take place.

The theory of Greene's New York friends is that the Boston clique has taken advantage of this and started to make trouble on a big scale between the Americans and Mexican miners, and that the trouble has got beyond their control.

A dispatch from Naco, Ariz., says that Governor Ysabel of the State of Sonora, Mexico, arrived there at 7:30 o'clock today and immediately gave orders permitting the armed Americans who were there from Bisbee, Douglas and all parts of Arizona, to re-cross the line to Cananea.

The Americans organized, and in command of Captain Tom Rynning left with the governor on a special train for Cananea at 8 o'clock. There were 450 men in the party.

WASHINGTON, June 2. United States Consul Galbraith at Cananea has sent the following dispatches to the State Department dated Naco, Arizona:

Consul Wires for Help.

"Send assistance immediately to Cananea, Sonora. American citizens are being murdered and property is being devastated and we need have help. Answer Naco, Arizona, immediately."

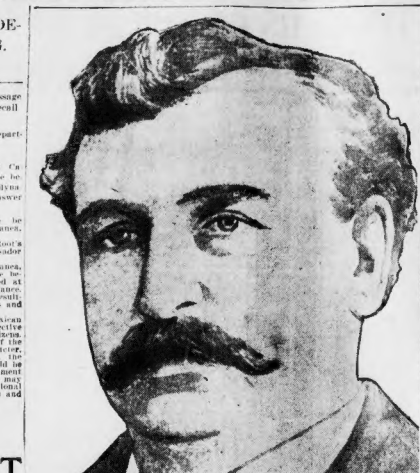
The second dispatch:

"Imperative immediate assistance be rendered American citizens at Cananea, Sonora, Mexico."

Following is Secretary of State Root's dispatch of instructions to Ambassador Thompson at Mexico City:

"Galbraith, Consular agent at Cananea, telegraphs that American citizens are being murdered and property demolished at that point and asks immediate assistance. Press dispatches report strike riots resulting in race conflict between Americans and Mexicans.

"Bring to the attention of the Mexican government, and ask prompt and effective control to protect all American citizens. Say to the Mexican government that if the matter appears to be of serious character, as the dispatches seem to indicate, the government of the United States would be glad of any suggestion of the government of Mexico as to the course which we may take to prevent violation of international obligations on the part of our citizens and to help promote peace and safety."



COLONEL W. C. GREENE, REPORTED KILLED.

200 ARE REPORTED KILLED IN FIGHT

NACO, Ariz., June 2. A telegram just received states that the dead at Cananea now number nearly 200. The information was brought from the town by refugees, who had arrived in Naco on a special train.

The riots started, these refugees say, over the refusal of Colonel William C. Greene, owner of the mines and smelters, to increase the wages of the Mexican miners. The Mexicans struck and announced that they would not allow any Americans to work. The Mexicans armed, and, without warning, fired on the Americans.

The refugees reported that the fighting was desperate when they left. The garrisons of the United States forts nearest the border are dispatching aid at once.

Although it is not admitted that orders to move toward Cananea have been received, the preparations would indicate that the soldiers are preparing to act the moment that an order comes from Washington.

Thirty armed whites, who came here from Bisbee to go to Cananea and assist the Americans there, were ordered immediately before midnight by Mexicans half a mile from here. The Americans were attempting to cross the line at that point, and get on the Mexican side, where they were to board a special train. Just as the first one stepped across the line the Mexicans began firing.

It is not known how many of the latter were injured. George Shaffer of Bisbee was shot in the arm. All but six of the Americans have returned here. It is not known whether the six were killed, wound ed or have escaped in another direction. All people are praying for the arrival of 500 soldiers from Bisbee to overwhelm the Mexicans.

AMERICANS SHOT DOWN BY MEXICANS

DOUGLAS, Ariz., June 2. Riot and bloodshed swept the little smelting town of Cananea, Mex., from noon until darkness last night, and as a result forty five Mexican miners are dead. Twice as many are wounded, many of whom will die. Fifty Mexican miners and four Mexican policemen have been killed and upwards of 200 Mexican miners wounded.

The trouble began at noon, when the Mexican miners left the entrances of their mines and assembled in the public square of the town, or mining camp. Here a delegation was sent to demand of Colonel W. C. Greene, owner of the mines and smelters, that the wages of the Mexicans be increased from three to five Mexican dollars daily.

STRIKE BEGAN AT ONCE.

Colonel Greene, who had been confined to bed with a fever, refused to be consulted with the committee for more than half an hour. He agreed to an increase in wages, but said it would be impossible for him to grant it without the consent of the Mexican authorities. He gave as word that he could not obtain consent from Governor Ysabel at Hermosillo and, if the latter were agreeable, the demands would be granted. This did not satisfy the Mexicans and a strike was at once instituted.

Then the announcement was made by the Mexicans that, if they could not work at the increased wages, American employes in the mines would not be permitted to work. Without warning the Mexicans armed themselves and descended upon the whites.

AMERICANS MOWED DOWN.

Taken thus by surprise, the Americans, at fearful disadvantage, were quickly mowed down before the ruthless fire of the Mexicans. They made as brave a stand as possible, and as soon as arms could be secured, the fire of the Mexicans was returned with telling effect.

Immediately Colonel Greene sent an appeal to Governor Ysabel at Hermosillo, and Captain Thomas Rynning of the Arizona Rangers was asked for troops to help put down the turbulent Mexicans. General Ynabel at once ordered troops from Hermosillo, which reached Cananea at midnight. Captain Rynning gathered in the Rangers and, with 500 armed Americans from Bisbee, left on a special train for Cananea at mid night. The special was stopped at the Cananea depot daylight to-day.

A special train of fifteen coaches, loaded with special officers and armed citizens, left Douglas at 5 o'clock last night and will take on another force at Naco, from which point the train will proceed to Cananea.

A special train carrying 1,000 rifles and 1,000,000 rounds of ammunition for rangers has been started from El Paso, Texas, and will be rushed to Arizona via the Atchison soldiers at Cananea.

Colonel Greene is in charge of the situation at Cananea. He has sent his family and the women members of the American families over the border for safety.

Among the dead are General Manager J. Dwight Shattuck, Superintendent of Mines Department James Williams, Arello Carillo, Greene Metcalfe, Superintendent of Fuel Department James Williams, Arello Carillo, proprietor of the Mesa Hotel.

MEXICANS FIRE BUILDINGS.

The Greene lumber yard was one of the first places to be fired by the Mexicans. The fire department responded, but only after fully $500,000.

Then the general offices of the Cananea Copper Company were dynamited and burned, as were many residences occupied by Americans.

The warning fire in a number of places. The Mexicans secured arms and ammunition by dynamiting pawnshops. There large quantities of rifles and cartridges were kept. A great many of the Mexicans had been employed by the railroads and armed themselves and laid in a store of cartridges. Many members of the Mexican police force joined the strikers and led the leaders of the rioters.

The situation is very grave. Intensified trouble is feared, notwithstanding the fact that Governor Ysabel has consented to the entrance of the hundreds of armed American and American soldiers.

TAFT SENDS ORDERS TO RECALL TROOPS

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Orders have been sent from the War Department to the commanding officer at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, to recall any troops that may have started for the scene of the mine riots in Cananea, Mexico.

If, as stated in earlier dispatches, a troop of cavalry started at daybreak, having only forty miles to travel, it seems very doubtful if it can be recalled.

The order was sent after a conference between Chief of Staff Bell, Secretary Taft, Secretary of State Root and representatives of the Judge Advocate General's department. It was decided that troops should not be sent into Mexico except as a last resort, no matter how serious the situation. The Mexican government will be expected to exhaust every possible resource to stop the looting and protect such Americans as may have escaped.

Rioters Beyond Control.

Additional dispatches from United States Consul Galbraith and from other sources state that burning, pillaging and dynamiting are still going on, and that the disturbance is beyond the control of the local authorities.

The first news of the affair reached Washington early to-day in the press dispatches. Shortly afterward a telegram was received by the State Department from United States Consul William G. Galbraith, at Cananea, giving in brief the story of the attack by the Mexican miners upon the Americans and stating that the situation was so serious as to demand imperatively the presence of American troops.

The State Department is endeavoring to get direct communication with the Mexican government to ascertain what steps have been taken by Governor Ysabel to quell the disturbance and apprehend the rioters, also to learn whether there are any objections to the United States assisting in this work. It is believed here that inasmuch as the Mexican government has shown itself powerless to cope with the situation. It will consent to the temporary appearance of American troops on Mexican soil.

Rangers Said to Have Gone.

If the reports be true that the Arizona rangers and other armed bodies of citizens have crossed the border, the United States has already technically violated provisions of international law in failing to prevent an invasion of a friendly state.

Fort Huachuca, Arizona, is 75 miles from the border in Arizona, and about forty miles from Cananea, in Sonora, Mexico, adjoining the scene of the disturbance. It is garrisoned by troops A, B, C and D of the Fifth Cavalry. The remaining troops of this regiment are distributed at other posts in Arizona, Utah and New Mexico. The regiment is commanded by Colonel Clarence A. Stedman.

GREENE STOCK DOWN AS RESULT OF RIOTS

NEW YORK, June 2.—There was complete demoralization in the curb market to-day in the trading of the securities of the Greene Copper Company, because of the reports from Mexico that the lumber plant had been burned and that the big smelters might be dynamited if the riots of the Mexican strikers.

The market for Greene Cop... opened ten minutes before the regular opening time. Thousands of shares of Greene Copper were thrown on the market, which broke the price from 30½ to 24¾. The few supporting orders were quickly filled, and the price fell away under the onslaughts of selling orders. Greene Copper is a stock held in New York, Boston and Washington.

Greene Copper broke badly in Boston, where it fell from 28¾ the opening price, to 24½.

FALL RIVER WAGE CRISIS NEXT WEEK

Textile Council to Meet on Thursday, When Positive Action May Be Taken.

Special to the Boston American.

FALL RIVER, June 2.—Requesting the five affiliated textile unions to hold special meetings on or before Wednesday next to determine what action should be taken regarding the contention of the manufacturers that the present wage and working day agreement is binding for a period of one year and their demand for arbitration in the event of a dispute, the Textile Council adjourned to-day to meet next Thursday night to take action upon what the workers decide shall be done.

At the meeting next Thursday the council will be apprised of what the slasher tend ers, orders, spinners, weavers and loom fixers have decided proper to do in the matter of the wage question and the working rules.

The difference between the committee representing the Textile Council and the executive committee of the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' Association, which was held yesterday, decided nothing. The textile workers expressed dissatisfaction with the present wage agreement, while the manufacturers stated that they believed that the present agreement was binding for a period of one year. The textile workers declared that they did not understand it that way, and that the only part that they considered binding upon them was that which referred to the minimum wage.

SUBWAY PANIC; 3 CARS BURN

NEW YORK, June 2.—Empty cars collided in the subway yesterday, causing a short circuit with the third rail and overheated the tunnel at Broadway and 107th street into a furnace. The destruction of a sheathed car, the burning of the interior of two steel cars and the buckling of the structures under the intense heat, showed what is to be expected if cars laden with passengers ever meet a similar accident. This accident occurred at 5:33 p. m., when the rush was on. Thousands of people were thrown into a panic.

Five women fainted and other half-conscious women were taken to a drug store and revived.

DEATH OF MAINE CAPTAIN IN CHINA

Word was received to-day by George H. Lyman, Collector of Customs for the port of Boston, of the death from cancer of Captain Henry Stevens Lawrence in Nin chwang, China. Captain Lawrence was a native of Dresden, Me., where his brother Albert now lives. Captain Lawrence was engaged for over forty years in shipping on the Chinese coast, having had many escapes from death.

STANDARD OIL GIVES $100 TO FIREMEN

The Standard Oil Company has sent a gift of $100 to the Firemen's Relief Fund of Boston.

With the check was a letter complimenting the firemen of East Boston for their good work at the fire on the company's barges, at East Boston, two weeks ago.

HEAT MENACE IS VANQUISHED BY SEA BREEZE

Boston Threatened With a Sizzling Day When Wind Came in from Ocean.

Starting in early to-day with ever apparent intention of breaking a record, lifted by clear skies and hot sunshine, the temperature was checked in its upward rise by a sea breeze that was welcomed by everyone in Boston. True, when the cooler wind which blew in from the ocean did not get free play the weather was uncomfortably warm.

"Fair to-night and Sunday. Cooler to night," is the prediction issued by the local forecaster in the weather bureau.

Owing to the sea breeze, the local weather bureau is not expecting intensely high temperatures to-day. A pleasant Summer day both for this and to-morrow is anticipated. Sunday clothing will be in order and can be worn on excursions without danger of any chills sudden and disagreeable drop in temperature as that of last Sunday.

At the weather bureau at 8 o'clock this morning the thermometer stood at 72; at 9 it was 76, and then the sea breeze caused it to fall to 73. At the same hours at Thompson Spa, the mercury stood at 72, 76, and at 10 o'clock it was 80. This shows what wilting heat Boston had every where to-day if it had not been for the sea breeze.

RESCUE RUM FROM RIVER

Special to the Boston American.

BANGOR, Me., June 2.—Deputy Sheriff Ralph Smith of Old Town, while driving home last night, met two men who were navigating a wagon load of whiskey, rum and ale in Old Town. He gave chase, and the pursuit continued all the way to Bangor, nine miles.

When the men on the liquor wagon saw that they were likely to be caught they threw the whole load into the Penobscot River. That ended the chase, and the sheriff went home, thinking that he would get the liquor later.

But the news had spread, and long before the sheriff could get into his driving clothes the boys and dock loafers along Hancock street were at work, and a large part of the liquor was recovered.

MOTORMAN SAVES BOY

By his presence of mind and quick action in applying the brakes Motorman John Mullen of No. 1,185 Dorchester avenue saved the life of four-year-old Roger Chambers of No. 1,821 Dorchester avenue to-day, when the little fellow suddenly darted in front of the car to get a ball. The car came to such an abrupt stop that passengers were thrown out of their seats. The boy was hit up the fender, but not seriously injured.

Dr. Gibbs attended the injured boy. An examination showed bruises on the side and face, but they will heal rapidly.

ANSWERING INSINUATIONS IN STATEMENT OF REV. THOMAS W. BISHOP,

MOTHER DECLARES TUCKER ALWAYS A GOOD BOY

Denies That There Was Anything Wrong in His Bringing Up, and Says He Was Industrious and Never an Idler.

"There are certain conditions which surrounded the boy during his early days which, in the event of his death, I think it my duty to make public, but at this time I cannot do so."—Statement of Rev. Thomas W. Bishop, C. L. Tucker's spiritual adviser.

Mrs. Lucy A. Tucker, mother of Charles L. Tucker, today refuted the insinuations made by the Rev. Thomas W. Bishop in his statement that if Tucker was executed he would make some things public about his early life that he could not speak of now.

Mrs. Tucker said that she could not imagine what the clergyman referred to, but she asserted emphatically that Charley was a good boy, that he attended public school and Sunday school and that after he began to work at the age of sixteen he was not idle three months from then until his arrest for the murder of Mabel Page.

"My two boys were well brought up," said Mrs. Tucker at her home in Auburndale. "We had only the two children, and most everybody knows all about them now. We devoted our whole souls to bringing them up right.

"Both Walter and Louis went to day school and Sunday school. Walter was in the superintendent's Sunday school class when he quit going. Louis went to the same Sunday school until his fifteenth year, when he quit both Sunday school and day school and went to work.

"It has been said that Louis was an idler. That is not true. In all the years from the day he went to work down to the time he was arrested for this awful trouble he was not idle three months. He was a hard-working, ambitious boy and far from an idler.

"He worked here with Mr. Robertson, and later in Boston, where they dealt in fishing tackle. He used to walk the floor at night after he came home memorizing the catalogues of goods and prices. I have held the book and watched that he recited the prices correctly.

"I'll tell you how I know that Louis was not idle more than three months in all that time. He paid his board regularly. His father kept the accounts of the board, and he has them yet. These accounts show that Louis earned money and paid his board regularly.

"I am ill to-day with rheumatism, and will not be able to leave the house. One of Louis's counsel told me that Louis had been taken to the prison in Charlestown. He told me that Louis was cheerful. He believes that the Governor will save him. I believe that he will also."

MOTHER MAY NEVER AGAIN EMBRACE BOY

Never again, until he is dead, can Mrs. Lucy A. Tucker take the form of her son, Charles, in her arms, unless Governor Guild commutes his sentence. Even a hand-clasp is forbidden.

Iron bars, unyielding, placed close together, are fixed between Charles Louis Tucker and everyone he holds dear, and from behind them he will never walk until he is taken to the death chair nearby or is marched away to the shops for life imprisonment.

He may, indeed, be visited by his fond mother, his aged father and his brother for brief periods, but these touches of affection so dear to humanity are made impossible by the cold, inflexible bars which pen the young man in until the doom fixed by the law claims him.

One solitary pleasure, and one very dear to him is still left to Charles L. Tucker. He can yet kiss his mother when she comes to visit him in his death cell. The iron bars are not so close together as to make this communion impossible. Under the close scrutiny of the guards placed in the cell by the State, the mother and her boy may yet kiss each other, but further than that no embrace is possible.

Tucker is bearing up well under the circumstances. He can read, for the death house is sufficiently well lighted by windows in the roof to permit of this until the sun sinks low on the horizon. This is a great comfort to the condemned man, for one of his greatest pleasures has been his privilege to read. The windows which light the death house are not covered by bars, for that is unnecessary, they being but a foot and a half long and three inches wide.

Through these narrow apertures filters all of the light of God's earth that Charles Tucker will ever see again unless he escape the chair. Even that pale, filtered messenger of the great, boundless, free earth is a comfort to the young man as he paces the narrow confines of his cell.

Tucker slept well, his first night in what may be the last room he will ever occupy. At 8 o'clock a good breakfast was brought to him by Warden Bridges, and to the "Good morning, Tucker," he returned a cheery response.

The young man ate the meal with apparent good appetite, and later, at 10 o'clock, Warden Bridges brought him a bag containing oranges and bananas. These comforts Tucker thoroughly appreciates and his thanks to the warden were very sincere.

Until noon to-day no one had called upon the young man. His long night in the strange, forbidding quarters and the hours of the morning dragged away without his seeing the face of any one he loved or even his attorneys. But he told Warden Bridges that he was not disappointed for he was not expecting any visitors to-day.

Mrs. Tucker, under the regulations of the Charlestown prison, will be permitted to call upon Charles every day if she wishes, but not oftener than once a day. The death watch will be present at all times during the visits paid between mother and son. The interviews, too, are limited. The mother may not stay with her boy longer than thirty minutes, says the law, and the warden says the regulations are strictly maintained.

GUILD GUARDED FROM INTRUDERS

Fearing that some hysterical person, wrought to a frenzy through a consideration of the case of Charles Louis Tucker, may make a scene before Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., or possibly as attack upon him, the executive office in the State House is being carefully guarded against any such intruders.

Scores of letters threatening bodily harm and political death unless Governor Guild's ability to Tucker have been sent to the State House addressed to the Governor. Some of them has reached Mr. Guild—they have been torn up and thrown into the waste basket.

The letters containing threats have been for the most part anonymous. The names and addresses attached to some have been found upon investigation to be fictitious. They have served, however, to cause a feeling of uneasiness to pervade the executive office.

William L. Reed, the colored messenger on duty at the door of the outer waiting room, has been instructed to keep a sharp lookout for any person of a suspicious character who wants to see the Governor. He has been particularly admonished to keep out any women of excitable temperament who want to talk to the Governor about Tucker.

Messenger Reed has been told to stop everybody who wishes to enter unless they are personally known to him or with some one whom he knows, until he is satisfied what they want and that they have a legitimate right to enter. At any time when Messenger Reed is absent from his post his place is taken by Messenger J. F. Macdonald, who has the same instructions.

The visit of a woman to the Charlestown Prison a few days ago, who made a scene before Warden Bridges, together with the threatening letters received at the State House, caused the precautions to be taken to guard the Governor.

TUCKER'S FATHER IS ILL UNDER STRAIN

Racked by months of suffering over the fate of his son, Albert F. Tucker, father of the condemned Charles Louis Tucker, showed evidence of breaking down last night and his condition gives his family the deepest concern.

Mrs. Tucker, mother of the condemned young man, said to an AMERICAN reporter to-day:

"I am still bearing up with strong confidence, but the illness of my husband, due to nervous strain and worry over our poor boy, adds to the gloom that fills our home. It does seem strange that the hand of fate should be made to lay so heavily upon an innocent boy.

"I remember the day of Mabel Page's death so well. There can be no question about the time Louis left the house and the whole world must see that he could not have done it. The time would not permit, besides a mother's heart cannot be deceived. I know my boy is innocent.

"When I visited Louis in Cambridge Thursday he asked if I had been to the cemetery and spoke about his grandmother, whom he always loved so well.

"'Did you put flowers on grandma's grave?' he asked, and I answered, yes, I did what I could.

"Mr. Winslow has been very kind and active in our behalf, mother. I wish so much that he could come to see me. It seems hard, indeed, that he cannot. Mr. Bishop, also, is doing his utmost, I know.

"Louis spoke of his friend, Walter Ashe, in Providence, who has afforded us a great deal of comfort in this affliction.

"I know that Walter wanted to visit me very much. I wish I could have a few more words with Walter, it would do me good.

"I do not forget that Harold Page promised Florence Andrews that he would come to see me, but he has not come. Surely I would be overglad to see Harold for every reason. I feel sure I could convince him that I could not have had anything to do with the death of his sister.'

"If my son is transferred from Cambridge to Charlestown, I shall continue to see him there. I may go and see Louis on Sunday if it is possible, and my husband and Walter also desire to go.

"I appreciate the efforts being made on every side in our behalf and I sincerely will go to Cambridge and personally thank the sheriff and those in charge for their considerate treatment of poor Louis and we who have recently called upon him there.

"Louis, too, is filled with gratitude. Only Thursday he remarked: 'Mother, I feel that I will be given my liberty in spite of the great discouragements that have been heaped upon our efforts, and when I do I will find some way to repay those kind-hearted ones who have tried so hard to help us.'

BEHIND THE BARS OF THE DEATH CELL.

The photograph of Tucker, which the artist used in making this picture, is the best known portrait of the condemned boy. Thousands of copies of it have been sold to women. This human document, more than anything else, has aroused the sympathy of the public and has been largely responsible for the common belief that Tucker was not guilty of the murder of Mabel Page.

NOTHING BUT NEW EVIDENCE WANTED

Governor Guild has decided that counsel for Charles Louis Tucker will not be allowed to present any one at the hearing on Tuesday unless he or she may be able to give absolutely new evidence in favor of the condemned young man.

No one with the exception of counsel for Tucker will be allowed to make a plea for a commutation of sentence. Relative to this matter the following correspondence passed between counsel for Tucker and the Governor:

The letter to Governor Guild from Tucker's attorneys is as follows:

Boston, Mass., June 1, 1906.

To His Excellency Curtis Guild, Jr., Governor of Massachusetts:

Dear Sir—We have your favor of yesterday concerning your request to examine the petitions which we have already filed with you for the commutation of the sentence of Charles L. Tucker, for the purpose of selecting therefrom the names of such persons as we choose to call as witnesses at the hearing before you on Tuesday next.

We have not suggested, and do not now suggest, that you invite anyone to appear and speak at the hearing. We shall offer our case as agreed upon with you, in two parts: one by the production of witnesses and affidavits concerning new evidence; the other by producing witnesses who will present to you such reasons for executive clemency as seem important.

It is as important that we should be permitted to present witnesses on this branch of the case as on the other, and we prefer to present the witnesses in person where we can, rather than by affidavits or statements in writing.

"Would Be Extremely Unfair."

We do not think that you are called upon to invite any citizens to be present at the hearing before you. In the performance of our duty as counsel for the prisoner we shall present such witnesses as all pleases of the case as in our judgment should properly influence you in arriving at a determination of the issue. Those who represent the Commonwealth have an equal right to present such persons as they choose as witnesses.

It would be extremely unfair to permit us from calling such witnesses as we choose to present our side of the case. The issue is momentous, and we think it proper, where we can secure the attendance of witnesses, that we should be permitted to present fully and freely. The fact that more than a hundred thousand petitioners have already gone on record publicly as favoring commutation does not change the situation upon this feature of the hearing, from our point of view, because which is given to do. In a very limited and unobtrusive way, is to call such people as we choose to state, not that they have signed the petitions, but the reasons which induced them to do so. In this way in which we have decided to do this the privacy of the hearing will not be invaded.

We did not suppose when the petitions were filed in accordance with your wishes, so that you might have opportunity for careful examination, that we should later be denied the right to examine them for any purpose, in preparation for the hearing.

We invite your most careful consideration to this suggestion, and would like a decision at your earliest convenience, in order that we may make our plans for the hearing. Respectfully yours,

YAHEY, INNES & MANSFIELD.

In reply, Governor Guild made public the following letter:

The Governor Replies.

Messrs. Yahey, Innes & Mansfield, No. 18 Tremont street, Boston, Mass.:

Gentlemen—I am in receipt of your communication of even date, and beg to assure you that I have not the slightest objection whatever to your copying from the petitions on file at this office for the commutation of the sentence of Charles L. Tucker any or all the names thereon.

The note which the young man from your office brought to the executive department yesterday afternoon, and Mr. Innes's conversation with me later over the telephone, indicated that your purpose in desiring to copy those names was to invite a selected number of petitioners, not witnesses, to appear at the hearing, not for the purpose of furnishing information, but for the delivering of personal appeals for commutation.

I felt it my duty to tell you squarely that I could not endorse any such discrimination between citizens. I cannot agree to any change in arrangement for the hearing you state in your letter to-day. "We shall offer our case as agreed upon with you, in two parts: one by the production of witnesses and affidavits concerning new evidence; the other by producing witnesses who will present to you such reasons for executive clemency as may seem important."

May Present New Evidence.

As I stated in my letter yesterday, you will be given every opportunity to present new evidence not passed upon by the courts, and will also be given every opportunity to present any witnesses needed for the presentation of new facts. I do not, however, regard a person who, without new information, merely wishes to appeal for executive clemency as a "witness." What I distinctly wish, in common with you, is that the fullest opportunity shall be afforded for the presentation of such new evidence as you may have to present. What I cannot consent to is the presentation of personal appeals by selected individuals, with no new knowledge of facts bearing on the case.

The reasons for the petition for clemency will, in my judgment, be best stated by those who framed the petition and circulated it—that is to say, by you. Those who urge commutation and those who are opposed to it have already gone on record.

If they wish to go on record again, or at greater length, I shall give every due consideration to their views expressed in writing. Such opinions so expressed may be sent to me directly, or, if you prefer, may be presented by you at the hearing.

I must, of course, leave the question to you as to whom you shall summon as genuine witnesses with fresh information. I shall expect you to furnish me in advance, not later than Monday noon, with a list of such persons, together with a statement as to the general character of the evidence to which you expect each one to testify. Respectfully yours,

CURTIS GUILD, JR.

DIVIDE CROWDS IN CAR ROUTE TO WONDERLAND

Management Plans Better Trolley Service if Advice Is Heeded.

EASY GOING TO-MORROW

There will not be such a crush in getting to Wonderland tomorrow, as there was Memorial Day, if intending pleasure seekers will take the advice of the management, given after a conference with the Boston & Northern railroad officials.

Persons going from the city proper and from north of Boston will leave if this advice is taken, by the street cars from Charlestown to Revere and by the ferries and Narrow Gauge railroad. People leaving Dorchester, Jamaica Plain, Forest Hills, Milk Bay and other southern points will do well to take the East Boston tunnel route. This will divert the crowds into three channels and make it possible for every one who wants to reach the big amusement resort to get there.

Upon entering the surface car in any of these suburbs, passengers should buy an eight-cent ticket to Revere Beach, via the tunnel. This, by the payment of one additional cent, will take them to Orient Heights and entitle them to a transfer to the surface cars there for Revere Beach.

Cars from Orient Heights to Revere Beach have been running on fifteen-minute time, which has been found insufficient. From now out, on rush days and during rush hours, they will run on ten-minute headway, as on five at any time the crowd requires it.

By these divisions of traffic it is planned to allow everyone who wishes to reach Wonderland without great loss of time and without getting into a terrible crowd.

PROVIDENCE, June 2.—The striking weavers at the Parker Mills, Fall River, have decided to stand out for the 10 per cent advance in wages demanded rather than go to work on the assurance that everything will be adjusted satisfactorily. The strike at the Pocasset Mills has been temporarily settled pending a city wide adoption of the two-loom system by the operatives.

NEW YORK, June 2.—When H. H. Rogers, Jr., returned to his home from Philadelphia yesterday and opened his suit case he was surprised to find a lot of soiled linen instead of his own clothing, jewelry and papers. GRAPHIC NOVEL REVEALS HORRORS OF THE STOCK YARDS

THE AMAZING REVELATIONS IN UPTON SINCLAIR'S "THE JUNGLE"

FIRST INSTALMENT OF THE STORY THAT HAS SHOCKED THE WORLD.

The BOSTON AMERICAN to-day reproduces the first instalment of Upton Sinclair's famous novel "The Jungle," which first called attention to the methods employed in the great meat packing houses in Chicago, and which will be run as a serial in this paper, through the courtesy of Doubleday, Page & Co.

Before the firm put the book on the market it assigned unbiased investigators to verify the accusations made by Mr. Sinclair. These probers made a report which corroborated in every detail the expose of the author. They found that meat unfit for human consumption was being packed in cans and sold throughout the country. They found that so-called food, almost rank in its condition, was being palmed off on the public as a necessary of life, when in reality it was practically a poison.

Readers of this serial—launched as a novel, but now ranking as a document inseparable from the fight for better conditions in the country—will have an opportunity to get into intimate acquaintance with the methods employed by the greatest packing houses in the world, and will be enabled to realize how monopoly can, under existing conditions, multct the public and make profit out of commodities which are not only useless as a diet, but are positively injurious.

The story, which follows, is dedicated to the workingmen of America.

CHAPTER I.

Copyright, 1906, by Doubleday, Page & Co. All rights reserved.

It was 4 o'clock when the ceremony was over and the carriages began to arrive. There had been a crowd standing all the way, owing to the exuberance of Marija Berczynskas. The occasion rested heavily upon Marija's broad shoulders—it was the task to see that all things went in due form, and after the best home traditions—and, flying wildly hither and thither, bowling everyone out of the way, and scolding and exhorting all day with her redundant voice, Marija was too eager to see that others conformed to the proprieties to consider them herself. She had left the church last of all, and, desiring to arrive first at the hall, had issued orders to the coachman to drive faster. When that personage had developed a will of his own in the matter, Marija had flung up the window of the carriage, and, leaning out, proceeded to tell him her opinion of him, first in Lithuanian, which he did not understand, and then in Polish, which he did. Having the advantage of her in altitude, the driver had stood his ground and even ventured to the attempt to speak, and the result had been a furious altercation, which, continuing all the way down Ashland avenue, had added a new swarm of urchins to the cortege at each side street for half a mile.

This was unfortunate, for already there was a throng before the door. No sooner had it started up, and half a block away you could hear the dull "broom, broom" of a "cello, with the squeaking of two fiddles which cried with each other in intricate and attitudinous gymnastics. Seeing the throng, Martin abandoned precipitately the debate concerning the ancestors of a policeman, and, springing from the moving carriage, plunged in and precipitated a clear path even to the hall. Once within, she turned and began to push the people out. "Meantime, "Kik! Kik! Ickarsk durin!" in tones which made the orchestral uproar sound like fairy music.

"Z' Gratulasyon, Ustyllukeminnname dar sas," Yyuss, Smapsas. Wines and Liquors. Union Headquarters." Then she was in the right room. The reader, who perhaps had never held much converse in the language of the far-off Lithuania, will be glad of the explanation that the place was the rear-rooms of a saloon in that part of the city known as "back of the yards." This information is definite and valuable as to the matter of fact; but how pitifully inadequate it would have seemed to one who understood that it was also the supreme boon of mercy in the face of one of God's gentlest creatures, the scene of the wedding feast and the joyful consummation of little Ona Lukoszaite!

She stood in the doorway, shepherded by Cousin Martin, breathless from pushing through the crowd, and from excitement, and very pale. There was a light of wonder in her eyes and her lips were parted, and her otherwise wan little face was flushed. She wore a muslin dress, conspicuously white, and a stiff little veil clinging to her shoulders. There were five pink paper roses twisted in her veil, and eleven bright green rose leaves. There were new white cotton gloves upon her hands, and as she stood staring about her she kept biting her lip nervously. It was almost too much for her; you could see the pain of too great emotion in her face, and all the tremor of her form. She was a child, not quite sixteen—and small for her age, a mere child; and she had been married by the Reverend Father Ignatius Jyonaitis, of all men, to Jurgis Rudkus. So with the white flower in the buttonhole of his new black suit, he with the mighty shoulders and the giant hands.

There is also, not six feet from your back, the bar, and no one order all you need for her age, a mere child; and she had been married by the Reverend Father Ignatius Jyonaitis, of all men, to Jurgis Rudkus. So with the white flower in the buttonhole of his new black suit, he with the mighty shoulders and the giant hands.

Ona was blue-eyed and fair, while Jurgis was brown as a berry, with round red cheeks and thick black hair that curled in waves about his curse—in the days they were also of those incongruous and impossible marriages couples with whom Mother Nature sees fit to confound all prophets, before and after. Jurgis could take up a 250 pound quarter and hold it nearly at arm's length without a stagger, or even a thought; and he was the finest specimen of a man a recruiting officer ever picked out of a crowd. He was as good-natured as he was powerful, and so fond of his bride that he would have carried her home upon his back without effort. He did not know that he was good-natured, or that he was fond of Ona; he knew only that he felt happy and good, and that the future was rosy with promise.

Gradually there was effected a separation between the spectators and the guests—a separation at least sufficiently complete for working purposes. There was no time during the festivities when there were not groups of onlookers in the doorway and at the entrance, and any one of these onlookers came sufficiently near, or looked sufficiently hungry, a chair was offered him, and he was invited to the feast. A charming informality was one of the characteristics of this celebration. The men wore their hats or, if they wished, they took them off, and their coats with them; they ate when and where they pleased, and moved about as they pleased. There were to be speeches and toasting, but no one had to listen who did not care to; if he wished, meantime, to talk, he betook himself to the corners of the hall. The resulting medley of sound distracted no one, save possibly the ladies, of whom there were present a number equal to the total possessed by all the guests invited. There was no other place for the babies to be, so part of the preparations for the evening consisted of the collection of cabs and carriages in one corner. In these the babies slept, night and late, and were only wakened together, as the case might be, when it was time to go home. A GORGEOUS CAKE.

The room is about thirty feet square, with whitewashed walls, bare save for a calendar, a picture of a racehorse and a family tree in a gilded frame. To the right there is a door opening into a bar, with a loafers in the doorway, and in the corner beyond it a keg with a spluttering faucet. Also in solid white, with waxed black mustache and a carefully oiled curl piece treed against one side of his forehead. In the opposite corner are two tables, filling a third of the room and laden with dishes and cold viands, which a few of the less prier guests were already munching. At the head, where sits the bride, is a snow white cake, with an Eiffel tower of intricate decoration, with sugar roses and two angels' specimens and a surmounting ring of pink and green and yellow candles. Beyond opens a door into the kitchen, where there is a glimpse to be had of a range with much steam scrubbing from it, and many women, old and young, rushing hither and thither. In the corner to the left are the three musicians, filling the platform, toiling heroically to make some impression upon the hubbub. These musicians, similarly occupied, and an open window, whence the passers-by catch fleeting sights and sounds and odors.

Suddenly some of the attention begins to distance, and, peering through it, you discern Anus Elizabeth, Ona's step-mother, Teta Elzbieta, as she is known for—bearing aloft a great platter of stewed duck. Behind her is Kotrina, the second wife, ponderously, staggering beneath a similar burden, and half a minute later there appears the old Grandmother Majauszkiene, with a big yellow bowl of smoking hot sauerkraut. So, bit by bit, the feast is big as heretofore. There is a brief pause, it takes form—there is a huge, macaroni, bologna sausage, great piles of penny buns, bowls of milk and foaming pitchers of beer.

READ UPTON SINCLAIR'S GREAT NOVEL, "THE JUNGLE," IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

Upton Sinclair's new famous novel, "The Jungle," which has brought about the exposure of the terrible conditions in the great meat packing houses in Chicago, the centre of the industry, and which caused President Roosevelt to send representatives to make an investigation, verifying the author's statements, begins to-day as a serial in the BOSTON AMERICAN. The next instalment of this great story will appear in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN to-morrow.

AN INSPIRED MAN.

The little person who leads this trio is an inspired man. His fiddle is out of tune, and there is no room on his bow, but still he is standing upon a little platform, and muses have been laid upon him. He plays like one possessed of a demon, to a whirl of sleeves, with a coat figured with faded gold horseshoes, and a pink striped shirt, suggestive of peppermint candy. A pair of military trousers, light blue, with a yellow stripe, serve to give that touch of distinction of authority proper to the leader of a band. Every other man in the place feels, and even so, these trousers are about eight inches above the ankles, on the ground, where he can have gotten them—or rather where they have gotten him. The excitement of being in his presence left you time to think of such things.

For he is an inspired man. Every inch of him he is inspired, one might almost say inspired separately. He inspires his fellow musicians, he inspires his head, he sways and swings and leads them, and every little while he irresistibly exudes; and, when he executes a turn of peculiarly fine frenzy, he rolls his lips work and his eyelids wink—the very ends of his shoes curl up, and, over and over again, he turns upon his companions, nodding, signalling, beckoning frantically—with every inch of him appealing, imploring in behalf of the muses and their call.

APPEAL FOR MUSES.

For they are hardly worthy of Tamosius, the other two members of the orchestra. The second violin is a Slavish, tall, gaunt man with black-rimmed spectacles, and the cornet a pallid look of an overdriven mule; he responds to the slightest touch of the leader's foot and back into his old rut. The third man is a Jew, fat, with a sentimental nose, and he plays with his eyes turned up to the sky and a look of infinite yearning. He is having a bass part upon his cello, and so the excitement is nothing to him. No matter what figure in the treble, it is his task to saw out one long-drawn "um-m-m-m," until at last the long form of the second violinist also rises up, in the end all three of them begin advancing, step by step, upon the banquet-ers, the Valentinskis, the cellist, bumping along with his instrument between steps, and the second violinist and the cornet following suit. Finally, all three are gathered at the foot of the tables, and there Tamosius mounts upon a stool.

He is in his glory, dominating the scene. Some of the people are eating, some are laughing and talking—but no, all are not; a great mistake if you think there is one of them who does not hear him. His notes are never true, and his fiddle buzzes on the low notes and squeals like a stuck pig on the high; but these things they heed no more than they heed the dirt and the smoke and squalor about them—it is out of this material that they have to build their lives, with it that they have to utter their souls. And while he plays, his utterance varies and bolsterous, or mournful and wailing, or passionate and rebellious, this music is their music, music of home. It stretches out its arms to them, they have only to give themselves up. Chicago and its saloons and its slums fade away—there are green meadows and sunlit rivers, mighty forests and snow-clad hills.

They behold home landscapes and childhood scenes returning; old loves and friendships begin to waken, old joys and griefs to laugh and weep. Some fall back and close their eyes, some beat upon the table. Now and then one leaps up with a cry and dances for his song or that; and then the fire leaps brighter in Tamosius's eyes, and he flings up his fiddle and shouts to his companions, and away they go in mad career. The company takes up the chorus, and men and women cry out like all possessed; some leap to their feet and stamp upon the floor, lifting their glasses and pledging each other.

Before long it occurs to some one to demand an old wedding song which celebrates the beauty of the bride and the joys of love. In the excitement of this masterpiece Tamosius Kuszaikis begins to edge his way between the tables, making his way toward the head, where sits the bride. There is a foot of space between the chairs of the guests, and Tamosius is so short that he pokes them with his bow wherever he reaches over for the low notes; but still the presence in all kinds of dignity that his companions must follow. During their progress needless to say, the fiddle and the cello are pretty well extinguished; but at last the two are at the head, and Tamosius takes his station at the right of the bride and begins to pour out his soul in melting strains.

Little Ona is too excited to eat. Once in a while she tastes a little something, when cousin Martin pinches her elbow and presses her; but for the most part she sits gazing with the same fearful eyes of wonder. Teta Elzbieta is all a flutter, like a humming bird; her sisters, too, keep running up behind her, whisper-ing, breathless. But Ona seems scarcely to hear them—she sits gazing, and gazing, the far-off look comes back, and she sits with her hands pressed together over her heart. Then the tears begin to come into her eyes, and one is ashamed to look at them, and then to go on and make a little speech of his own, in which he showers congratulations and prophecies of happiness upon the bride and groom, presenting as pledges which greatly delight the young men, but which cause Ona to blush more furiously than ever. Jokubas possesses what his wife complacently describes as "poetishkas valuditunves"—a poetical imagination.

BRIDE'S TEARS COME.

Now a good many of the guests have finished, and, since there is no pretence of ceremony, they also begin to get up and break up. Some of the men gather about the bar; some of the married women find a neighbor here and there will be a little group, chatting merrily, and in sublime indifference to the scene of revelry in the middle. Everybody is more or less rootless—one would not know if one were at a ball or in one's own house, for all the difference in their minds. And so it proves. The last large group to break up is that which still is before the tables and the debris are shoved back, and the floor is cleared, and the cabbies piled out of the way, the real celebration begins.

PRESIDENT TO FLAY TRUST IN BEEF MESSAGE

To Be More Vigorous Than Inspectors' Report of Horrors, It Is Said.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—President Roosevelt's special message to Congress, which is to accompany the Neill-Reynolds meat inspection report, is about finished. Nothing remains to be done upon it except the President's feelings of friendship for gentlemen who dictate the ups and downs of the beef business of the country.

The Neill-Reynolds report, it is understood, substantiates as a whole the charges of horrifying unsanitary conditions at Chicago, set forth in Upton Sinclair's book "The Jungle." It is also understood, however, were unable to find any evidence to indicate that the packers had put their lives in the rendering vats and had been transmuted into sausage meat, which, as Mr. Sinclair asserted had come to pass, in the story of unspeakable filth attributed to the slaughter houses which Sinclair has pilled with so much skill, to condemn.

The reason as assigned by the President for withholding the report from the public is unwillingness to injure the thousands of innocent persons throughout the country who derive their livelihood either directly or indirectly from the meat industry of the packers and the cattle, the transportation companies that carry the meat, live or dead, from one part of the country to the other, and the retail butchers who sell to the consumers. It should not be punished for the sins of the packers, the President believes, and therefore, that he could secure the passage of the Beveridge amendment, which would correct the evils, without being obliged to destroy the industry, the inspectors' report public, packers, believing that they have sufficient remedy in their hands through the Presidential plans, have forced his hand and he is resolved to "call the bluff."

VICE PERIL IN N. Y. HERALD "RED LIGHT" PERSONALS

Investigation by Parkhurst Society Reveals Awful Dangers to Boys and Girls.

NEW YORK, June 2. The investigation of the New York Herald's "Red Light Column," as the "Personals" in that newspaper are called, by the Parkhurst and other societies for the suppression of vice and crime, has brought to light some amazing facts, showing that a newspaper of reputed respectability is furnishing a vice directory for the youths of the city.

Vice is flaunted openly in the Herald's columns, and under thinly disguised "Personals" the "white slave" traffic is promoted.

Affidavits properly executed and signed, proving that the Herald's "Personals" are vicious and illegal, are to be used by those who have taken up the investigation.

"It is enough for such a paper to decry yellow journalism," said the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst today. "In Europe, that yellow journalism is white compared with black journalism. No worse journalism can exist than that which, while calculatingly gells itself to the promotion of lust and crime, is in fact an illustrative directory for those in quest of lawful houses.

Read by Girls and Boys.

"It is readily seen just how much injury this sort of journalism can work in a community," said the Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers. "Young girls and boys, who might never in any other way be led into a vicious life, are bound to read them. If the Herald is to be allowed to publish its "Personals" only to look at the first page to see the colors flying, it is high time for the Parkhurst Society to begin to take some definite steps to put a stop to this."

The personal is more pernicious than the painted woman or the rose on the public streets, for young persons are brought in good attendance know enough to avoid the latter.

When Christopher J. Burns, a Brooklyn insurance agent, who recently advertised for a fifteen-year-old miss to accompany him to matinees, was arraigned before Magistrate Higginbotham, it developed that the Parkhurst society has undertaken an investigation of the advertisements in the personal columns of the Herald.

Burns, when he appeared to-day in court when the Burns case was called and, after being sworn, was asked as to the circumstances leading him to the advertisement. Higginbotham changed the charge against Burns from vagrancy to attempted abduction. He was held in $3,000 bail, and will have a hearing on June 7.

Vice of the Lowest Type.

Robert S. McClellan, the agent of the Parkhurst Society, and before Assistant District Attorney White a mass of evidence and sworn proof that the Burns "Personals" are upon advertisements of the of the lowest type. The evidence was not presented to the court, as it was not necessary to secure Burns's conviction for trial. Both the District Attorney and the magistrate believe that prompt action has been assured at the conditions revealed by the investigation.

Mrs. Burns and the wife's associates were aroused to an unusual pitch of indignation by the publication of the facts. They have also interview he declared that the situation of affairs between him and his wife would be ventilated to the bottom.

Rev. Cortland Myers is particularly indignant over the bold personals directed against the girls and young women of Brooklyn. He declared that such advertisements should be excised out of newspaper papers, and he will give his personal attention to such Herald personals as refer to his field.

Daring Even for Herald.

The Gerry Society in Manhattan and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to children in Brooklyn are giving particular attention to the Herald's which serves to bring the infants of such children before the public notice at this time.

The activities for the suppression of vice have long kept an eye on these particular columns and are ready to join in a fight for their suppression.

The Burns advertisement was particularly daring, even for the Herald. Burns deals in furnishing girls to the Temple Bar Building, near the Brooklyn City Hall, and lives with his wife at No. 477 Jefferson avenue. In the Herald last week he advertised for "miss of fifteen to act as a secretary and to accompany him to matinees."

CAPEN BUST IS UNVEILED

'87, Edwin G. Cox of the College of Letters, President Frederick W. Hamilton and Mrs. Shuman made brief eulogistic addresses in memory of President Capen. The American was peculiarly fitting, owing to the fact that the day is the thirty-first anniversary of the inauguration of Dr. Capen as president of Tufts.

In part Mr. Shuman said: "President Capen was a man of rare ability, earnest of purpose, energetic and public spirited. He was also a man who knew that this college, which he loved so well, was but one of many splendid educational institutions of the State. How to make it worthy of these was in the keenest high standing and efficiency of this

DUTIES MORE IMPORTANT THAN RIGHTS

—ROOSEVELT TO NEGROES

Tells Students to Remember, While Eyes Are Fixed on the Stars, They Are on Ground.

WASHINGTON, June 2—In addressing the graduates and students of Howard University tendered last night at the commencement exercises, President Roosevelt said:

"In speaking to the members of the graduating class and to their friends and relatives, I desire to lay particular stress upon the importance of the possession of high ideals; and, second, that these ideals shall be followed. I want to see a man prosperous, but in your prosperity see that is high and honorable, and at the same time to have a practical knowledge of how to use your prosperity.

"Your first duty is to achieve success by material prosperity so as to keep you from becoming a burden to those about you. The material welfare must be the first foundation stone in a career; there must be no flimsy work if there is even welfare first. I do not wish to see any graduate leave this institution with his eyes so firmly fixed upon the stars that he forgets that he is still on the ground.

"I have a profound distrust of the individual with a philanthropy that does not first serve the world whose wife and children do not first experience his philanthropy.

"I want you to realize the burdens of American citizens, and the obligation to enlighten your race.

"The rights of a man are important, but his duties are more important, and if he are faithful in the performance of duty the rights will care for themselves."

TOIL THROUGH SONG.

Sometimes the men sing at their work, thus they toil through stanza after stanza of a love-sick swain's lamentation.

Sudley kwutsell, tu brang ass,
Sudley! Sudley! Sudley!
Mutate—jookere tep Ashore stole's
Sudley! Sudley! Sudley!

When the song is over it is time for the speech, and old bede Adunas rises to his feet. Grandfather Anthony, Jurgis's father, is not more than sixty years of age, but you would think that he was eighty. He has been only six months in America, and the change has not done him good.

In his manhood he worked in a cotton mill, but then a coughing fell upon him, and he had to leave; out in the country the trouble disappeared, but he has been working in the pickle-rooms at Durham's, and the breathing of the cold, damp air, all day has brought it back. Now as he sits at the head with a glass of beer in his hand he holds himself by his chair and turns and sways to the music, and tries to participate. Generally it is the custom for the speech to be taken out of one of the books and learned by heart by his youthful days Dede Antanas used to be a scholar and loves to hold forth to the loafers of his friends. Now it is understood that he has composed an original speech of congratulation and benediction, and this in spite of the fact that he has had to learn that, and then to go on and make a little speech of his own, in which he showers congratulations and prophecies of happiness upon the bride and groom, presenting as pledges which greatly delight the young men, but which cause Ona to blush more furiously than ever. Jokubas possesses what his wife complacently describes as "poetishkas valuditunves"—a poetical imagination.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

A vote of thanks was extended the Franklin Fund Trustees by the Building Trades Council grievance committee last night for acting in matters of the benefit of organized labor in the selection of the corner of Berkeley and Appleton streets as the site for the new Franklin Union Building.

In regard to the work on Christian Science Temple, the following statement was given out: "The Grievance Committee asks all Christians to lend their voice to the condemnation of the methods used on the Christian Science Temple. The delivery of marble work of the temple has been finished by merciless labor in Marietta, and have been solicited to go to work and prove false to every law of mankind by the substitution of dwelling as a day, lots of overtime, and a bonus of $50. Thus have they succeeded in defeating organized labor."

The asbestos workers, who are on strike, requested the Grievance Committee to notify all labor unions throughout the State to demand that all asbestos workers arriving in their cities have paid-up union cards. The strikers are still firm, and feel confident of ultimate assistance, are confident that victory will crown their efforts. Business Agent Cashman was instructed to see that union conditions are established at a building corner of Dorchester avenue and Greenwich street.

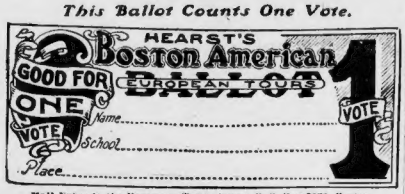
EUROPEAN TOUR ELECTION

TEACHERS MOVE UP IN THE BOSTON LIST

This Ballot Counts One Vote.



Mail Votes to the European Tour Editor, P. O. Box 5131, Boston.

Strong balloting for teachers in the Shakespearian Tour class of the Greater Boston list of the European Tour election sent four candidates upward over competitors.

Misses Madeline Driscoll of Roxbury, Minnie Donovan of Quincy, Madeline Foppiano of Boston and Elizabeth Rogers of Charlestown, yesterday improved their standing, passing above Misses W. May Nash of Cambridge and Mary A. Haverty of Roxbury. Among those outside the tour list, Miss Mary V. Burnett of Wellesley displaced Miss Gertrude Simpson of Dorchester.

The voting was steady and strong all along the line outside of the Metropolitan division yesterday.

Mrs. Nellie A. Bulleman of Worcester increased her lead over Miss Grace J. Allan of Bristol for the grand capital prize of $500.

Miss Annie M. Bonds of Brockton went above Miss Margaret Donohoen of Lowell in the Massachusetts division.

Miss Gertrude L. Hall of Putnam passed Grace L. B. Mulligan and took position behind Miss Margaret Hickey of Wallingford, the other Connecticut candidate.

READVILLE WILL GET CHAMPIONSHIP RACE

NEW YORK, June 2—The trotting match race with three of the trotting champions of the harness turf—Sweet Marie, 2:04¼; Tyrelton, 2:04½, and Wentworth, 2:04¾—will come off at the Readville track on July 4, under the auspices of the New England Trotting Horse Breeders' Association.

This was decided at a meeting held last night at the Gilsey House, in which Alta P. McDonald, of Albany; John Hoyt, of New York, and Emerson E. McCargo, of Philadelphia, managers, respectively, of the horses named, met, posted the second forfeit of $1,000 and also selected date and track, as agreed upon in the original contract, made in February.

The match is for $2,500 a side and, according to the contract signed last night, the Readville association agrees to add the sum of $7,500 to the original purse. The track and date selected are the best that the parties interested could agree upon, and the race is bound to be the most memorable event in the history of the harness turf so early in the season.

PLANNING NOW FOR NEXT YEAR'S SHOW

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, incorporated, at a meeting of the board of directors yesterday voted to proceed with the arrangements for its 1907 show, which will unquestionably be held in March next. Secretary Chester I. Campbell was authorized and instructed to go ahead, and there is no doubt but what he will endeavor to surpass the handsome record made a few months ago.

Word comes from France that the big French touring competition, the Circuit Européen, may be postponed until next year. Though the promoters expected an entry list of 100 cars, but fifty-two had been nominated on May 18. A request was made by a German motorist that the competition be postponed until next Spring, and this idea has met with support from French makers, many of whom were seriously delayed by the strike of last month. The contest is scheduled to cover 3,000 miles, starting from Paris and passing through Milan, Vienna, Berlin and Cologne back to the French capital. Percy Pierce of Buffalo, who won the Glidden tour last year, is the only American entrant who drives an American car.

Percy Pierce is now in France, awaiting the start of the Hermick competition. It will be too bad if after his trip abroad the second big contest of the year should be abandoned.

Walter C. Marmon, secretary of the Marmon Company, was in Boston yesterday, visiting his local agent, Mr. F. E. Wing. He talked interestedly about the events of the future, and expressed the opinion that in the touring competitions of this year, both domestic and foreign, the American car would show to a particularly good advantage. Talking about his own product, he said that the year had been a record one with his firm. It had been forced to work overtime, and yet they had paid especial attention to the model of 1907 that it has been completed for over a month, and is being given the severest of tests over the roads of Indiana. Mr. Marmon is by no means a stranger to these parts, he having years ago come to Boston to compete in cycle events, he being a performer of no mean ability or speed.

Matters move quickly in automobiling, and particularly is this true in the sale of second-hand cars, providing the machine is a good one and in good running condition. An out-of-town automobilist went to a garage in this city that is engaged solely in selling second-hand cars by a novel plan. Customers pay a registration fee of $15, and the concern sends out broadcast a description of the machine and the price asked. The up-to-the man did not understand the plan fully, so he wrote asking for information and inclosed a description of his car, but without sending the registration fee, for a few minutes after his letter was received there was an inquiry for just such a car, and the selling concern offered the owner that it would sell the car on a 10 per cent. commission basis. This was agreed to, with the result that the profit on the intermediary's deal was $170 when it might have been but $15, and the old machine was before he had another chance to register it.

PRINCE ALERT WILL RACE IN VIENNA

AL THOMAS IS TRAINING SPEEDY LOT

That the biggest lesser of American trotting and pacing horses abroad, Mr. Winans of Sussex, Eng., will have a most successful season on the Continent, was assured from the accounts received here within the last few days.

The Cleveland trotter, A. C. Pennock, has the handling of the choice string of racers. He writes that on June 12 he opens the season at Vienna and remains on the Continent till October 28. Prince Alert, 1:59½, the pacer we all knew so well when owned by the Providence horseman, James Hanley, is being fitted for exhibition miles. Gallagher, 2:03¾, will get his racing entirety in England, as they have no pacing classes on the Continent, he writes.

Alta Axworthy, 2:10½, was lame when Pennock took charge of her, but she has come around all right and will be a hard mare to beat. Susie N., 2:09¾, the winner of the Kentucky Futurity last Fall, arrived here in England in good shape. She is figured ready money.

Some of the other ones in the string are Fanny Dillard, 2:09¾; John Carr, 2:07¾; Robert Lee, 2:09½; Charley B., 2:07¾; Emily Digret, 2:06½; Thomas Pewers, 2:08¾, and Tom Nolan, 2:08¾.

BOWLED 205 AT CANDLEPINS.

BANGOR, June 2.—Charles F. Longee of Waterville one night this week bowled one string of 205 at candlepins on a regulation alley. He was trying for a record and observed all the rules. It is said that this is a new world's record at candlepins.

MYLNE, WHO'LL DESIGN CUP YACHT, HAS MADE HIS MARK

Alfred Mylne, who has been commissioned by Sir Thomas Lipton to design a yacht, with which the Irish baronet expects to challenge for a race for the America's Cup, to be sailed next year, although a young man has already made a mark as a designer. He began to work on yachts in the office of the late George L. Watson and was regarded by Mr. Watson as a man of exceptional ability. He has been designing yachts for fifteen years and is now about thirty-five years old. Mr. Watson thought so well of him that he brought him to this country in 1895 when the third Valkyrie, designed by Watson, came after the cup.

Since the death of Mr. Watson Mylne has ranked second as a designer to William Fife, and in classes where boats turned out by these two men have come together Mylne has been remarkably successful. Until his last commission Mylne has not turned out anything larger than a 52 rater, and his Moyana, built in 1903, is a wonderful boat and still a hard one to beat.

Reputation at Stake.

Mr. Mylne is a progressive man. He is not much bound to British traditions, as were Watson and Fife, in turning out cup yachts. He knows that the challengers have often, if not always, been beaten by their failure to build to the limit of the rule under which the yachts were constructed. Mylne is now ready to go to the limit, as his reputation as a designer will depend very much on his success or failure.

Shamrock IV. will be Mylne's first large yacht, and whether he designs her under the old or the new rule of measurement she will have many new ideas in her form and construction.

Mylne started on his own account as a designer in 1896. At first he confined his efforts to small yachts, and had much success with the Monarchio, Zitella, Vasiti and others. These were followed in rapid succession by the Valmar, Jean, Shiiver, Suerte, Peyrie, Gertrude, Cynthia and the Abel and Thetis.

His first large yacht was turned out in 1898. Cloud A. Allen gave him an order for a 52-footer, and the Fiona was the result of his work. In 1899 he designed the Clyde 20-rater class, and these boats were so good that they were raced until last season. In 1903 A. W. Leuchars ordered a 52-footer, and George Cutts ordered a 42-footer. Both of these yachts were made history. The 52-footer Moyana is pronounced a masterpiece. Her draught and forward girth have made her a fine boat turning to windward. She goes about with astonishing ease, with her moderate overhang she reaches steadily and with speed and makes a fine showing down the wind. Mr. Mylne's second attempt in this class, the Britomarta, built last year for W. P. Burton, was hardly up to Moyana's standard as far as prize winning goes, but Britomarte was something in the way of an experiment in dealing with the long overhang allowed under this rule. Even now, with the experience of a season to judge by, it must not be to hastily decided that the yacht has fallen short of her designers' expectations. She was an improved boat toward the end of the season and, like Herreshoff's Sonya, she may do better in year.

Rival of Fifes.

Last year there was great rivalry between the Moyana and the Maymon, designed by Fife. The result was that Maymon scored 13 first, 11 seconds and a third out of 30 starts, and the three-year-old Moyana 20 firsts, 3 seconds and 1 third out of 35 starts. The Maymon finished 34 matches and the Moyana 30. The Britomarte started 24 times and finished 20, winning 6 firsts and 10 seconds. The Sonya was the last yacht in the season's record.

Last year Mylne headed the list in the 30-foot class with the Thetis, and his Arayne was third. All the four 19-footers, with places in the lead, were of his design.

In the season of 1905 Mr. Mylne had twenty-six yachts racing. These took part in 632 races, and won 252 firsts and 185 other prizes, or a total value of $10,615. Fife had thirty-two yachts racing in 698 matches. They won 179 firsts and 138 other prizes, of a total value of $17,055.

"Missouri," a "Real Sport," Would BAR NEGRO FIGHTERS!

BY TAD.

Here is a letter from a SPORT. It will do your heart good to read it. This man is a fight follower, and probably likes to see a good fight, but hates the colored man the way a beef magnate does sausage:

New York, May 29, '06.

Mr. Tad,

Dear Sir—I send you inclosed a clipping from one of your esteemed contemporaries. What do you think of it? The idea of praising that coon, Joe Gans!

BATTLING NELSON IS THE LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION, BECAUSE HE IS A WHITE MAN AND CAN BEAT ANY WHITE MAN THAT COMES.

If you editors would drop the name of Gans, or, if you did mention him, say that he is a "faker," the public would soon forget him. But when you publish favorable write-ups of black men, Mr. Jack Johnson, KEEP THEM IN THEIR PLACE. THEY ARE BELOW THE GROUND. THAT'S THE WAY TO TREAT THEM. THE AFRICAN AMERICAN IS THEY DO FIGHT, THEN WILL BE OLD AND FEEBLE AND WILL GET THEIR BLACK BLOCKS KNOCKED OFF.

I remember the time when you could not pick up a paper and see what Ashford, Dixon, Jones and a dozen other coons were BEATING SOME WHITE MAN.

The clubs are doing their part by not letting them fight, and if they do fight, they make them meet some man of their own color and thereby keep them from getting any more championships.

Now let the press do its work. DRAW THE COLOR LINE. GO TO THEIR MASS MEETINGS AND WHAT GOOD DOES IT DO THEM TO BE CHAMPIONS? THEY CAN'T GO ON THE ROAD AND MAKE MONEY.

I am a Southern man, and believe that it is the place of the white man to beat the black man, and not the reverse.

Yours truly,

CHARGES, "Missouri."

That letter certainly shows what a sport "Missouri" is. He wants no real good fights, but also desires the best men in the world barred and the second raters declared world's champions. What is a champion, unless he can beat every man in the world of his weight regardless of color.

Haven't some of the greatest fighters been black men? Are there any of the present-day heroes who can hold a candle to-day who could class with little George Dixon or Joe Walcott when they were in their prime? Will the battles they fought ever be forgotten?

The trouble with the black men is that they are too good. If they were easy and lost every fight three would be no such thing as the color line. Lovely only the bunk to get away from tough game.

Right now there are three first-class black men who cannot display their skill on account of the chicken-hearted lot of white fighters we have to-day. Years ago, when Kid Lavigne, Frank Erne, George McFadden, Kid Carter, Tommy West, Frank Slavin, Jim Corbett and other FIGHTERS were battling high there was no color line. They were fighters who wanted the real championship and the color of a man took none of their heart away.

It would be a grand idea to banish colored fighters, especially when they are the world beaters.

Joe Gans has an awful time to get a fight on, and only one out of every ten will take a chance. Jack Blackburn is willing to bet $1,000 that he can beat any lightweight in the land, but—the "calls" is still coming.

There is not a light heavyweight in the world who will battle with Jack Johnson for heavyweight honors, yet such men as Bobby O'Brien, Hart, Fitzsimmons, Burns and others claim honors as champion. What kind of fun, don't you think?

I guess it isn't the color about Aurelio Herrera at all, as Gans, but Aurelio isn't there like our friend Joseph.

If the black man can punch the white man on the jaw he should be given the chance. Fighters are fighters, nothing more. They would race a black man, wrestle a black man or debate with him, but fight—nix!

I don't like to see a black man walloped a white myself, but if they are in the game to show their skill it is coming to them.

NELSON AND MEXICAN MAY BE MATCHED AGAIN

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 2.—Followers of the boxing game were startled today when Manager Billy Nolan declared that he would be willing to match Battling Nelson with Herrera, who last Friday evening left the pavilion after refusing to step in the scales. The record fiasco has placed Herrera in a bad way so far as Los Angeles is concerned. Herrera, however, has intimated that he was not wholly to blame, and in the event of his explaining any untoward circumstances other than his own actions, there is a possibility that he might be given another chance.

Nolan stipulates that every precaution would necessarily have to be assumed, and that a $5,000 cash forfeit must be put up. Manager Metzer of the Pacific Athletic Club said that he is undecided as to what course he will take in the matter.

HALL HAS FOUR LAPS START ON WALTHOUR

With Walthour, the great Southern pace follower, giving Tommy Hall, the little Briton, and Will Stinson handicaps in the twenty-five-mile paced race at the Revere cycle track this evening the going should be fast all the way, and the Atlanta man will have to pedal from start to finish in order to win out. Hall will start with four laps on Walthour, while Stinson will have two.

It will be the British champion's second race in this country, and as he is now thoroughly acclimated, he will give the boys of Revere Beach all he can do to catch him in twenty-five miles. Hall is a very speedy rider and a favorite with the crowd. Stinson, with six laps handicap, will put up a good fight for first money, and the old war horse is apt to draw it down.

Young J. R. Coffey, the South Boston rider who made such a hit by winning his initial paced race at Revere on Memorial Day in a ten-mile affair with Logan and Connolly, will make his second appearance to-night in another ten-mile affair. This time he has selected Edgar Cullen of Lynn to do battle with, and he will find that he has tackled a difficult proposition, as Cullen broke into the paced race a year ago and gave a good account of himself. They will also be a half-mile novice race and a five-mile open, with prizes for the leader of each mile.

BIG AMATEUR MEETING AT THE HUB THEATRE

Entry blanks are out for the big amateur boxing show to be held under the auspices of the well-known Roxbury Hall and Athletic Club of the West End.

The classes called for are 105, 115, 125 and 135-pound divisions, together with a special open tournament in the heavyweight class.

The club has leased the Hub Theatre for the night of June 11, but this does not mean that the bouts are open to the public. On the contrary, no one can be admitted unless he is a member of a club or an organization affiliated with the A. A. U. There will be no tickets issued otherwise. The club has opened a down-town office at No. 7 Water street, where Secretary Joseph A. Woodman can be addressed on matters relating to membership and admission.

There will be no reserved seats. The invitation few into the club is fifty cents. The seats of the Hub Theatre are allotted in the order the requests are received. The orchestra will be allotted to those who apply first.

By adopting this method the committee hopes to be able to avoid the late rush that is customary in affairs of this kind. Besides the regular open classes, there will be five special bouts between the pick of the amateur ranks in this section of the country.

Notes of the Harness Horses

Just one hundred years June 8 Yankee trotted a mile in 2:30, which was a splendid mile in those minutes or better, and everybody thought "it was going some."

Frederick H. Parks of Glens Falls, N. Y., is dead. He bought the champion trotting gelding, Nelson, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, when record was 2:15, for $2,800, and two years later sold him to D. R. Ford for $40,000.

* * *

Dr. J. C. McCoy has been a mile with the pacing stallion Dan Patch, 2:01¼, in 2:22½, a mile that thinks he will get a fast mark that way before the season closes. Dan Patch is going sound. The doctor will not come to Readville to train this string as was suggested, as he has a good mile track on his farm in Kirkwood, Del.

* * *

Tobias Burke has sold the "queen of the Presidency Speedway," Lucy Long, 2:12¾, to a horseman of New York, who intends using her for matinee purposes. She trotted two quarters at Readville during the chess meet, safe to 32 seconds and was knocked down to L. S. Gates for $900.

Joseph Cairn Simpson, the noted turf writer of Oakland, Cal., is dead. Prior to his younger days he was a civil engineer in Imperialia, but when he drifted West became interested in horses. He was the author of "Horse Portraiture." After the Chicago fire he removed to the Golden State and established the breeding and training of trotting horses. He had the support of such trotting men as Governor Leland Stanford and Theo. Winters. He established the Breeder and Sportsman and was at the birth of the National Trotting Association. His interest was active in the racing clubs of California. He was over seventy years of age.

The fastest mare yet reported from the camps of the three great breeders, Senor Marie, Tiverton and Wentworth, which are matched to race for $7,500 July 4, is from the first named, which was a mile in 2:20, actual time, and the watches on the last two furlongs of the three in 30 seconds.

Bennie Steinway, the green California racer that has been a quarter in 28 seconds at Hawthorne Park, Cicero, Ill., has been turned to the Grand Circuit. Bonita, He is headed for

Some do say that the Cleveland track is not a fast one other than Readville, yet out there pacer Minitta, 2:13½, has been a mile in 2:14¾, while some one of the trainers have dared to beat 2:20 in their workouts.

Jack Curry has arrived at Cleveland with Tune, 2:08¾; What, 2:11; Charley T., 2:18¾; Parrell W., 2:13¾, a couple of green trotters and the pacer Bonita, 2:12½, to be added there from Pleasanton, Cal. His first start will be at Detroit next week.

Hiram Woodruff, who in the days of Rescon Fuller was known as "Young Hiram," is located at Southbridge, Mass., with six horses, including Lucy Wilkes, 2:13¾, Lucy Wilkes and Kate, 2:23¾.

Trainer Howard Hayden of Dover, N. H., has received from Hon. Norman J. Daniel, Presidio county, Texas, the trotting mare, Penny Hero, 2:14¾. She has been off the turf for a couple of seasons on account of not being able to go on from lost mare she stopped. Her dam was the great looking mare Edith J., 2:19¾.

Dick Mitchell is at the Natick half-mile track with eight horses. The horsemen in that section have formed a club, again take an interest in the harness horse, the local driving club having plans to hold several matinees during the season.

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, June 2.—Fans flocked to the ball park in great numbers this afternoon to see the last game of the Pilgrims before they leave for the Western trip. To night Collins and his men will take a train for Syracuse, N. Y., the home of Big Bill Dineen, where to-morrow they will play an exhibition game with the locals, Big Bill pitching part of the game. After this contest the Bostons move on to Cleveland, where they open Monday.

For the closing game on the local links this afternoon Tannehill was on the cards to turn the trick. Jesse got in bad the other day, but it is seldom the clever southpaw pitches two poor games in succession, and Long Tom Hughes was down to oppose the left-hander. The Pilgrims have never been bothered to any extent by Long Tom, and the fans looked for a victory to wind up the series.

Although Billy Hamilton of the Tri-State league is in town looking for players, it is not expected that he will be able to make any inroads on Collins's team. The Bosts are satisfied with their berth and will continue as long as their pitchers are set on factory to the local managership. No one has received his ten days' notice of release as yet.

TEN EYCK NOT TO TRAIN GREER

WORCESTER, June 2.—Frank B. Greer of Boston, the crack champion sculler, will not come to Lake Quinsigamond to train under Jim Ten Eyck for the national regatta until a couple of weeks before the affair. Because he devoted so much time to training last year, he classed with the National Amateur Association of Oarsmen as the interpretation of the amateur definition would make him a professional. He takes this course this year to avoid criticism.

Special to the Boston American.

BROOKLYN, June 2.—The fans do not need to ask "What is the matter with the Boston Nationals?" as just one peep at their playing will tell them. They are playing "dead ball," and there is no fans that can win playing in such fashion. Howard, Dolan and the rest of the nine are playing like bums and it's no wonder that the team has dropped fourteen straight, and they will drop that many more if they don't get on to themselves.

The Boston play their last game away from home for a month this afternoon. To night they leave for home, where they open up Monday with the Pirates. Then all the big Western teams will come to the Hub looking for scalps.

The Bostons have probably been shut out more than any other team in the country. Yesterday they were blanked for the second time running by the Brooklyns, who walloped them 3 to 0.

Strickett, the spit ball inventor, pitched for the home team and did well, while Lindaman, who started the game for the visitors, was knocked out of the box in the third inning and gave way to Wilhelm, who was a big improvement.

SOLDIERS FIELD, Cambridge, June 2.—Harvard and Cornell met on the varsity diamond this afternoon in what promised to be one of the closest games on Soldiers Field this year. The Ithacans have been making an excellent record this year, while Harvard has not been doing so well as in former years. The Harvard nine has been completely shifted around recently in order to do everything to break the losing streak. Captain Stephenson was on first base the afternoon, Pounds and Giles from the second team in right and centre fields and Ned Currier behind the bat. The latter has been doing some star playing recently, and was given a big welcome.

Cornell gained her faith to Umstead in his pre twirling, while Harvard relied on Gardiner Greene, who did so well against Princeton last Saturday.

SCHOOLBOY ATHLETES IN CHAMP GAMES

STADIUM, Soldiers Field, Cambridge, June 2. Young athletes representing eighteen schools of New England competed for the interscholastic championship to the twelve events on the card.

It was a large list of entries for the annual outdoor games, and some fine performances were posted before the last event was over. Exeter and Andover had their strong squads trained for the fray, and these schools counted on taking the great bulk of the points.

Worcester Academy, English High of Boston, Boston Latin and Brookline High were well represented by promising individual athletes, and had several surprises on hand to spring on the larger schools.

The Andover boys were particularly zealous to defeat their Exeter rivals, who won the dual meet a week ago, and the competition was hot between them.

The track was in perfect condition for fast work and the weather suitable for the establishing of some new championship marks in the different events and it only depended upon some of the cracks to live up to their past performances to break records that existed.

HYLAND FIT FOR GOODMAN

One of the greatest contests ever seen in the vicinity of this city will occur next Thursday when Dick Hyland, the fighting demon from California, will face Kid Goodman. These boys are to box fifteen rounds to a decision at 123 pounds at ringside.

Both Goodman and Hyland are sure of the result, each claiming it will end in a knockout.

Mish Murray, who has taken charge of the Lincoln Club, assures the members that the club will henceforth be conducted on the same high plane which characterized the Criterion Club.

In the semi-final next Thursday, Jimmy Gleary, of the South End will box Bobbie McGrath of Cambridge eight rounds.

LYNN, June 2.—The two leaders of the New England League were down for a battle to-day. The drubbing the locals got yesterday at the hands of the Worcester bunch put them in a fighting mood and with the best pitcher, "Hi" Labelle, on the slab figured on making the visitors quit early in the game. The biggest crowd of the season was on hand to see the sport.

SOLDIERS FIELD, Cambridge, June 2.—The Harvard and Yale freshman nines met on Soldiers Field this afternoon on the varsity diamond as a preliminary to the big varsity battle between Harvard and Cornell. Last Saturday the Eli youngsters defeated the Harvard freshies at New Haven, and the Cambridge boys were anxious to get back at their rivals. Yale freshmen rarely if ever win the same at Cambridge, as the home team is always keyed up by a lusty-lunged and aggressive crowd of rooting freshmen.

YALE FIELD, New Haven, Ct., June 2.—Yale '06's crippled veterans, Kinney, Camp and Chapin, were able at start to-day's game with Princeton, although Camp and Chapin were still lame. Because Princeton presented south paw Byram, Coach Billy Lush ordered a Yale shift, sending Church, who is a right-handed hitter, to left instead of Madden, a left-hander.

Yeh Tigers did not arrive here till nearly 1 o'clock, and went directly to the Yale field. Only about 5,000 people saw the game instead of the usual crowd of 8,000. The day was humid and the cheer leaders wilted from the heat. The Tigers' rooters did what arrive until noon, and rooters did not arrive till noon, and refused to give odds. There was lively betting just before the game at even money, although Yale with only the green freshman "Huge" Parsons to depend on in the box, looked a shade the poorer.

QUEEN'S MAINMAST STEPPED.

PROVIDENCE, June 2.—The mainmast of the Queen, the new Maxwell racing schooner designed by Nathaniel Herreshoff to compete for the King Edward cup, was successfully stepped yesterday in the presence of designer and Captain Charlie Barr.

Cashen, 2b.	Dennie, l.f.
O'Brien, p.	Keen, c.f.

WORCESTER, June 2.—Holy Cross and Brown nine to-day in the second of a series of three games. The game was marked by all the friendly rivalry that has existed between the two teams in baseball in years past, and the usual large crowd from Worcester and surrounding towns was on hand to watch the battle between the two nines. Although Holy Cross won the first game 3 to 1, it was not until the ninth inning the winning tally was made, the Brown players putting up a hard fight.

Tiff, the premier southpaw who kept the locals guessing earlier in the season, was in the box for Brown and warmed up with a wealth of curves and excellent control.

O'Brien, who has been laid up with a sore arm, was back in condition and did the slab work for the locals. The Brown team was accompanied by a strong delegation of well-wishing fans and admirers. Despite the former victory of Holy Cross there was plenty of betting in evidence, Holy Cross ruling the favorite with odds of 5 to 3.

FLINT IS INELIGIBLE.

At a meeting of the Harvard Athletic Committee, the committee voted that P. W. Flint '06, bow oar in the varsity eight is ineligible to row as he is not in regular standing in his class.

You Get Married, Young Man, Says Beatrice Fairfax

GIRLS, I think you should speak up for yourselves.

Here are these bold bachelors hurling all sorts of accusations at you, and they must be contradicted.

They accuse you of extravagance, laziness, and dear knows what not.

Speak up and show them that they are all wrong.

In their hearts they know perfectly well that their accusations are quite unfounded, but we must not allow them to think for a moment that they can express themselves so freely without consideration.

Probably a great many of you have no desire to marry, but all the same you must not let the world believe that men remain single because they can't find good wives.

The bachelors have criticised the girls very freely. Suppose you turn the tables, and give your honest opinion of some of the bachelors.

I fancy some of the young bride of creation, who imagine that they have only to pick and choose, will be rather amazed.

Of course, the girls are sometimes to blame—but we'll talk about that later.

A Canny Boston Girl

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Indeed I agree with "A Bachelor," whose remarks appear in your paper, that he should not marry on $900 per annum, provided his future is not brighter. On such salary Mr. Bachelor, if he were to marry, would have to pick a decidedly economical, thrifty and sensible girl—a girl who knows things—and even such a young woman would have a trying time to keep his home running half way decently. Now, in my case, Miss Fairfax, I am a young woman of twenty, earning $1,000 per annum. I have a fair home and my parents are in fair circumstances. Do you think I would marry a man who earns $900 per annum? Never. No matter how much I loved him.

A BOSTONIAN.

How About This, Girls?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been reading with much interest your discussion on "Young Men, Get Married," and will say my case is just this: I have a comfortable home with my parents, am getting a small salary of $40 per month, and can only keep myself just decent, and I do not see how in the world I could possibly keep a wife and take care of myself the worry and responsibility of a home, as living is very high, and then I have never found the girl I would think for a moment of making my wife.

They are mostly a heartless, deceitful lot. All they care for is a good time and what money you will blow in on them. I look around among my married friends and see some of the wretched, wrecked homes, and know that in all these cases it was due to the wives of my friends either running around in their husband's absence with other men, or not being home to have a good warm meal for the breadwinner when he arrives. Now, do you blame us bachelors for not taking a desperate chance of ending our present little happiness in a matrimonial lottery? No, not for mine, not until women learn how to cook a good meal and make a home what it should be. Isn't that right, boys?

CONFIRMED BACHELOR.

Too Hard to Please

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Men know the responsibilities that they will have to undertake if they get married, and not only that, but there are and have been so many divorces in this country that we bachelors do not like to run the risk of getting into a mess of trouble.

As a rule, we bachelors are making a wise move by not getting married until we can find the kind of a girl we want. But how are we going to find the very girl that we are looking for?

If there was only a way so that bachelors could find what they want, there would, no doubt, be hundreds of marriages these days.

A. J. L.

A Sensible Letter

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I readily concede that marriage with a good woman broadens the mind and increases the ambitions of a young man, is it not, however, a long search to find a girl who would marry the man for himself instead of for the size of his bank book, or the value of his presents?

Taking myself for example, I am a young man of twenty-five, engaged in business, having but not penurious. I could, perhaps, afford marriage, and probably could find some girl to have me, but as I listen to opinions expressed by young ladies of my acquaintance I have formed an opinion that most girls marry to live in luxury and many instances to display the superiority of their catch over that of some friend's, and without other consideration.

If, after marriage, the reality does not reach her expectations, the wife screens herself a life embitterer in place of a life partner and helpmate.

My opinion may not be altogether right, but the reluctancy with which men enter matrimony nowadays proves that I am at least not all wrong.

Let girls look upon marriage in a broader and more sensible way, as a partnership, the trials of which both should assume and share alike, for better or for worse, and Cupid will work overtime. BACHELOR.

DOLMAN REVIVED BY DAME FASHION

THE dolman coming into vogue again! There can be little doubt that it is, for the most fashionable Summer wraps are cut much in the style of this garment, worn almost fifty years ago.

The first wrap is of the same material as the dress it is worn with, a short effect in brown and green taffeta. It is trimmed with heavy embroidery in the two colors and the whole finished with a deep fringe.

The second wrap is more for evening wear.

It is made of a very heavy pongee. The slashings are opened over bands of brown satin, with crossbar strappings of pongee.

HERE ARE TWO OF THE VERY LATEST GARMENTS, SHOWING THE UNMISTAKABLE REVIVAL OF THE DOLMAN TYPE

Men, Not Women, They Say, Are Real Slaves of Fashion

FOR ages past men have laughed at women for their devotion to Fashion's changing forms. They vow that the fair sex will take up any absurdity if only it originates in the right quarter, and that if royalty were to appear in sackcloth trimmed with sable the kitchen maids would soon be seen in the best imitation they could obtain of this newest mode.

This may have been true at one time, but women are learning a little sense. It is a very significant fact that, three years ago, when certain of the great Parisian modistes did their very best to bring about a return of the crinoline, women would have none of it.

American girls have become athletic, and, though their dress bills are as high as ever, they refuse to have anything to do with fashions that hamper their bodily activity. They are taking more and more to sensible fashions, short skirts and boots that will keep the wet out, and this is true not only of women who live in the country, but also of the grandes dames of the city.

One other hopeful point about women and fashion is that individuals nowadays are ready to discover what is becoming each in her own case rather than what is the mode of the moment. There is far more individuality in women's dress nowadays than ever before.

This is more than can be said of men. It is safe to say that not one man in a hundred ever considers what will suit him when choosing a pattern at his tailor's. He asks what is the newest thing, or else what will wear best—and takes it. Whether it is gray blue, green or brown matters not at all.

Consequently, you see pale, sallow-faced men looking simply ghastly in smooth blue serge; you see little men in big checks, tall men resembling lamp-posts in stripes. As for neckties, they are too appalling for words. Men seem to choose them at haphazard, and the fashion of colored waistcoats has made the matters worse instead of better.

Then nothing will induce the average man to depart one hairsbreadth from conventional attire. Over and over again attempts have been made to differentiate men's evening dress from that of waiters.

The King of England introduced brocaded silk dress waistcoats, but very few of his subjects had courage enough to follow His Majesty's lead. The day of knee breeches and silk stockings has passed, never, alas! to be revived. The curse of conventionality is on men's dress, and no one has originality or daring enough to break away from the horrors of silk hats, black coats, and those cylindrical abominations of the artist, trousers. Is it really true, then, that it is men who are the slaves of fashion, not women?

How My Lady Keeps Her Hands Beautiful

SOFT, white hands, with well-shaped, rosy nails, are an attraction not to be lightly considered.

The hands should be manicured at least once a week, and the time spent on the task will be found well worth the while. Always dry the hands carefully, and keep the flesh about the base of the nails free, so that the half-moons will show.

If the hand is very thin, fatten it by means of massage with a good skin food. A good preparation for tender hands, which is both softening and whitening in effect, is made of powdered marshmallow root two ounces, carbonate of soda two ounces, with twelve ounces of barley meal sifted into it.

While doing rough housework always wear gloves. It may seem a bother, but it repays the trouble. At night rub the hands with good cold cream, and slip on old loose gloves.

These are little duties that take but a few minutes to do, yet if persisted in regularly and systematically will result in soft-ness and whiteness of the hands.

TASTE COUNTS MOST IN DRESS

MONEY is by no means as essential as taste in regard to dress, and the girl of small means who with the latter quality will present a far better appearance than she who has much more to spend on such things.

For one reason, economy prompts more care and thought in choice of frocks and their adjuncts, for the girl of slender means knows that she must spend her money to the best advantage, while the girl who is lavish with her wealth is apt to buy and fling away the next, with a reckless ness which the well-endowed, whether rich or poor, never shows.

A careful glance at the occupants of beautifully appointed carriages to realize that money and good taste in dress are often far apart. Some women, devoid of the faculty of dressing well, will array themselves with good results in the hands of their dressmaker, the owner of natural taste in garbing herself will exercise it with comparatively small cost, if economy is necessary, by planning her toilettes skilfully. Of course, she who has both taste and money is a happy individual.

"WAIT!" silence—and this: That you have been trying to come in terests, instead of against you on Wynter's side. We should call or fall together. For instance, when Wynter returns we two being such good servants of the firm—might make some sort of a pact, and—well, accidents happen sometimes, you know, Haggard." And he looked meaningly across at the clerk. "Hullo. That's a ring. Who's your visitor?"

Perhaps the clerk from the office, I told him to come up to-night," said Grieve. "Boyes. We may have to have a lawsuit against Chevy, eating horses, you know. I expect it's Shuttleworth with the result of the interview."

West appeared at the door and announced that the clerk had called.

"You may show him in," said Haggard, sitting down in his swivel chair.

He was not sorry for the interruption; he had not succeeded in getting rid of Grieve, he was still wondering desperately if he could find a private interview by any loophole and deftly drive it home. It was all a case of trusting that he would enter into a partnership with this man whom he had despised—a man, too, who would never scruple to betray him if he could thereby benefit himself. Was there any way out?

Shuttleworth, Grieve's fellow clerk, entered—the very antithesis of Grieve, and Grieve's spot opposite. After the first absence of the partners, he not infrequently found himself the target of Shuttleworth's playful gibes, the latter being of a humorously flippant bent of mind.

Shuttleworth appeared rather surprised to find his fellow-clerk there. Grieve was standing in his old meek attitude, with the wooden, expressionless look on his face that in times past had evoked Shuttleworth's most brilliant sallies. Haggard was bending over his desk, without looking up.

As the irrepressible Shuttleworth approached his fellow-clerk he murmured in a voice only Grieve could hear:

"What, you here!—looking as cheerful as if you'd swallowed a frog and couldn't digest the plums! With a face like yours you ought to have gone into the undertaking business, old chap. You'd have done well at it!" surreptitiously nudging Grieve violently in the ribs with his elbow, all the time keeping an eye on the employer, to make sure that this facetious byplay was not observed.

"Shuttleworth," Haggard glanced up from his desk.

"Yes, sir," and the clerk walked up to the desk, leaving Grieve glaring at him furiously. Then a smile suddenly wreathed itself about Grieve's lips.

Shuttleworth handed Haggard the impor tant letters of the night mail.

"What about Beeves? What was their answer?" said Haggard. "You made them understand that this was our final word on the matter?"

"Yes, sir." Shuttleworth glanced across at Grieve for a moment. "Shall I wait till Grieve has gone, sir? Perhaps you won't care for a third person to hear the details of the interview, sir?" he said officiously.

Really, there was no particular reason why he should not speak before Grieve, who would probably have been intrusted with the rather delicate negotiations in question with Beeves, had he not been on his holidays, but Shuttleworth say an opportunity of putting things right.

For a moment Haggard did not speak. Something Grieve was doing had attracted his attention. Grieve was again poking the fire gently—Shuttleworth saw the action, too, and wondered at his impudence in daring to poke his employer's fire—making a little red cavity in it, then, while Haggard's eyes were still bent on him, losing none of the significance of that apparently simple action, Grieve, as if absentmindedly, picked up a crumpled piece of paper lying at the grate and dropped it into the heart of the red fire.

If the packet were only destroyed like that piece of paper, Haggard was thinking. But it would not be destroyed unless he agreed to Grieve's terms, and Grieve was master of the situation.

He turned to Shuttleworth, and said sharply, visiting on him the anger he felt at having to ask the servant's—

"Be so good in future as not to offer unsolicited advice, as you are to understand that Mr. Grieve"—with an emphasis on the words—"will henceforward occupy a position in the firm which will be virtually that of manager, with the whole of the paid staff under his control."

An Evil Shadow

And at this announcement Shuttleworth, remembering the playful personal comments he had flung at Grieve a moment ago, stared at the speaker, his face lengthening in his startled dismay.

The man he had just allowed in that facetious way of his was the manager of the firm out of which he earned his bread and butter—who had the power of dismissing him at a week's notice!

He glanced across at Grieve. Grieve had put the poker down; somehow, though his face was perfectly composed, his attitude suggested the impression of a man who was convulsed with laughter—helpless, internal laughter.

"In consideration of meritorious conduct and long, faithful service, I believe, Mr. Haggard?" And Haggard had to nod assent. Grieve turned sharply on Shuttleworth. "I shall have a few words to say by and by to you, Shuttleworth, to-morrow at the office when I take up my new duties.

"Yes, sir," stammered Shuttleworth.

"Good-night, sir," he said to Haggard, turning to go.

"Night," said Haggard, curtly.

"Good-night, sir," he added, humbly, to Grieve, who did not take his eyes from the fire or appear to hear the obsequious form. The door was closed.

"Well, I have agreed to your terms," said Haggard, abruptly. "Are you satisfied?"

Though the muscles of Grieve's face were unaffected, he again seemed to Haggard's perceiving eyes to be shaken with a silent laughter within himself, as Mephistopheles might have laughed over some trick of his that jarred on Haggard's nerves.

Shuttleworth's business was soon done. He gave Grieve in his sulky, surly manner the jaunty Shuttleworth who had come into the room a little time before.

"Good night, sir," he said to Haggard, turning to go.

"Night," said Haggard, curtly.

"Good-night, sir," he added, humbly, to Grieve, who did not take his eyes from the fire or appear to hear the obsequious form.

"Well, I have agreed to your terms," said Haggard, abruptly. "Are you satisfied?"

Though the muscles of Grieve's face were unaffected, he again seemed to Haggard's perceiving eyes to be shaken with a silent laughter within himself, as Mephistopheles might have laughed over some trick of his that jarred on Haggard's nerves.

Haggard himself was very far from laughing.

He felt like the man in the old legend who whispered: "Evil be thou my shadow!" Henceforward this man, the injured personification, as it were, of the evil he himself had done, would be his shadow! Never should he escape from which he could never shake himself free!

To Retain Good Looks

DON'T get into the habit of always smiling. It brings wrinkles round the mouth and eyes.

Don't dry your face in a hurry; a quick, anyhow rub coarsens the skin and injures its beauty.

Don't eat your meals quickly; this causes indigestion and a red nose.

Don't worry; other people's troubles are quite as bad as yours.

Don't walk five miles one day and six all the next.

Don't read till midnight; one hour's sleep before twelve is worth five afterwards.

Don't put your bedroom window; fresh air is necessary for health.

Don't expect physic and tonics to keep you well if you neglect the laws of health and hygiene.

LISTEN TO WIFE'S WORRIES

"NOW, my dear, for goodness' sake don't worry me with your domestic difficulties! I don't trouble you with my business vexations and knotty points!"

It is not too much to say that the above remark is familiar to all married people. The husband returns, tired with business worries; he expects his wife to meet him with a smiling face, and he is irritated if, over the dinner, she tries to relieve her mind by telling him of her day's difficulties.

Regarded from one point of view, it is but fair that, if he bears his burdens without worrying her with a recital of them, she should do the same, but the underlying principle is not a good one.

Both parties are apt to forget that it is a relief to share troubles, even if you have to take up the lot of someone else's in substitution for the half of your own which you have given on the other party's shoulders. The man, however, is the more forgetful of the two in this respect.

The common sense view to take is that it will relieve us to tell our individual troubles, but to tell them plainly and with a desire to take them philosophically.

The husband is quite enough to listen to and impart any pleasant intelligence concerning the day's happenings. In the majority of cases the wife sees fewer people than the husband, and her life is more barren, so, without desiring to worry him, she wants to confide in him.

As for him, he will feel all the better for having taken his wife into his confidence.

ADELINA PATTI'S RAINBATHS

MME. PATTI, although over sixty-three years of age, still enjoys the best of health and good looks.

"Fresh air and careful dieting" is her recipe for lasting youth. She considers that every woman ought to spend at least three hours daily in the open air—if possible, walking—and nothing but fog should, she says, keep a person indoors, provided only that suitable dress be worn. The complexion improves wonderfully under the influence of frequent rainbaths. "By all means," says Mme. Patti, "let the rain beat against your face as often as you have a chance. Only take care that your body is properly protected, and the elements should have no terrors at all for intelligent people."

Mrs. Langtry also confesses that she owes her continued good looks to very frequent baths, and the seizing of every opportunity to get into the fresh air.

SOME THINGS WELL TO KNOW

TO WASH BLANKETS

To wash blankets so they will retain their fluffy appearance, use soft water and plenty of it. Make a strong suds of soap, and in it immerse the blankets, previously shaken free of dust and lint. Never rub or scrub directly on the articles. Wash with the hands; never rub on a board. Use tepid several suds, having each suds hotter than the one which precedes it. This is the one great secret of the process. Rinse in the hot suds and keep it at the boil. Shake out well, pulling the edges straight, and dry quickly. Wash all wool ones the same way.

CHILDREN'S STOCKINGS.

An unusually thrifty mother suggests when holes in the heels or toes of the children's stockings are too big to darn a good plan is to cut out the worn parts entirely, then with a crochet needle and fine cotton wool or darning cotton go around and round the hole, gradually diminishing the stitches until the hole is completely filled up. This, no doubt, takes less time than if an attempt were made to darn the hole, to say nothing of its being more lasting.

DARN IN TIME

Children's merino drawers may be made to last much longer by darning or some other thin material be darned on the places as soon as they begin to look worn. The material should be placed on the inside of the garment, and the darning need not be done very closely. The edges, however, should be neatly finished down. This is particularly useful when a large part of the material has become thin.

TRY TOAST FOR HEALTH

SINCE most people are very fond of toast, but eat it sparingly, however, under the impression that it is bad for the health, it is pleasing to know that toasted bread is really very wholesome, even for invalids.

One thing in its favor is the fact that it proves a lighter tax on the digestive functions than ordinary bread, since during its preparation some of the starch grains of the flour are ruptured, while some are converted into dextrine, which is easily soluble.

Further, the crispness of toast necessitates its being completely moistened in the mouth before it can be swallowed. As a rule, therefore, toast is thoroughly submitted to the action of the preliminary digestive process in the mouth.

It is important, however, that toast should be crisp all through, as otherwise the tough centers tend to become pliable and soft, like new bread, and, like it, difficult of digestion if not thoroughly masticated.

Salvation for Drug Victims.

"BIG HAWLEY" offers his services to suffering humanity and is ready to show the road up from the Hell of Morphinism, the chloral, cocaine, opium habit, or any other form of narcomania. There are ten years of prison hospital experience and observation back of this advertisement. Did you ever stop to think that if you were sent to prison your "habit" would be broken for you in from 5 to 10 days, and you would be put to work at a daily task—when you have finished being "jockeyed" by high-priced sanitariums and worthless home cures? Write me—make no mistake—I have the goods. I am ready to deliver them. This treatment also restores those suffering from exhaustion, nervous prostration, partial collapse and senile decay—sick men in sanitariums are regarded as valuable assets. The longer they are ailing the more money for such concerns. Sick men in prison are looked upon as encumbrances—they are cured as speedily as possible, in order that their labor may be utilized. If you wish to be saved, rehabilitated, strengthened and to come face to face again with the lost buoyancy and spirits of your youth, write me—I can hand them back to you. It is the surest thing you know. Address by mail only. W. C. WOODWARD, room 3, 45 Eliot st., Boston, Mass.

UPTON SINCLAIR AND "THE JUNGLE"

Millions of men to-day know about Upton Sinclair and the work accomplished by his extraordinary book, "The Jungle." Every newspaper has spoken of him. Every intelligent citizen knows that he caused the President of the United States to investigate the Beef Trust privately.

The villains who have profited by Beef Trust atrocities know him only too well. They know that they owe TO HIM great loss in their shameful traffic TO-DAY and enforced decency and cleanliness hereafter.

What kind of man is Upton Sinclair?

This newspaper can answer the question. Long ago Mr. Sinclair sent here the proofs of his book. And more recently he obtained from the files of the Hearst newspapers facts with which to refute Armour's false statements—facts and affidavits published in them eight years ago.

Sinclair is a young man, barely thirty. He is a man, first of all, OF INTENSE EARNESTNESS. He is hopeful, optimistic about the future. And he writes of the crimes that organized capital commits, convinced that men can and WILL right the wrongs which they suffer.

It may be that old age will find him disappointed in some of the dreams of to-day. But it will certainly find him still resolute and hopeful, realizing, without bitterness, that centuries are necessary to bring about changes that youth would accomplish in a day; realizing also that it is THE VERY EXAGGERATED HOPEFULNESS OF YOUTH that gives the world its progress in the end.

Sinclair has worked hard. He has been poor—nearly starving at times. FOR HE PERSISTED IN DOING WHAT HE THOUGHT WAS RIGHT AND IMPORTANT, WHETHER HE COULD MAKE A LIVING IN THAT WAY OR NOT.

He has known the worry and the pain of extreme poverty, coupled with hard work and the care of a young family. But neither lack of money nor lack of immediate success could move him from his line of work. THAT IS WHY HE HAS SUCCEEDED AND WHY THE COUNTRY TALKS OF HIM TO-DAY.

This newspaper has purchased from Mr. Sinclair and his publishers the right to publish, COMPLETE, his great novel, "The Jungle," of which we have already spoken to you.

The first instalment of the novel is printed in this newspaper to-day.

This novel will be continued to-morrow morning, and every day thereafter until published complete.

It will probably be necessary to ask your newsdealer to reserve you a copy of the AMERICAN, if you wish to continue reading the story, as the demand will be very great, and many will be disappointed.

We hope that the publication of this book, serially, in our newspapers throughout the country will be of great service in awakening the public conscience to the crimes of the Beef Trust and of criminal trusts in general.

We hope also that the publication may result in financial good to Mr. Sinclair, through the increased sale of his book. A man of his character and public service should be made financially independent by his fellow men, as he has been made spiritually independent by his heredity.

It will please our readers to know that for the right to publish Mr. Sinclair's book serially in our newspapers—which includes no interest whatever in its publication in book form—we pay to him an amount of money exceeding all that he has been able to earn in six years of hard literary work.

This newspaper, which has steadily opposed the Beef Trust and its iniquities, rejoices that this young man should have had the will, the courage and the ability to write a book that HAS FORCED NATIONAL ATTENTION, including the attention of the President of the United States.

As a result of this movement, one trust will be made to know that the people are not entirely without means of defence; public health will be benefited, and another and a heavy blow will be given to the theory that criminally organized capital is above all power in this land, and that its profits alone are worthy of consideration.

We urge that you read the first instalment of Mr. Sinclair's book in this newspaper to-day, and that you continue reading it daily as the various instalments appear in the AMERICAN.

"Experts" Will Look Into Charges of Legislative Graft

The Committee on Rules Gravely Announces a New Method for Learning All About House of Representatives Bribery

Its members have decided to employ "experts" to investigate the scandal surrounding the killing of the anti-bucket shop bill. These "experts" will be instructed to ascertain who raised the money to defeat the bill, who had it, who handled it, and who got it.

The Committee on Rules of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, which, upon its own recommendation, is holding the "investigation" into the widespread corruption in the Legislature, has announced that after serious consideration it has at last discovered a way to learn the necessary facts.

The committee has heard from members of the House of attempts made to bribe Representatives. It has learned that one man was informed that a block of fifty men were on a certain list to be bought, and that at another occasion this block had shrunk to ten. It has not learned, so far as anyone knows, what members constituted the original block nor why the list shrank.

Although it appears to have been unable to discover evidence against more than one or two members, the committee HAS succeeded in rendering nearly every Representative immune from prosecution by proceeding under a statute which promises that all who testify before such a committee shall not be punished. Having succeeded thus far in bottling up the evidence and saving the boodle legislators from jail, the committee now plans to pass the responsibility for a failure to get at the bottom of the facts on to another body of men—the above-mentioned "experts."

These "experts"—the committee has not yet announced on what grounds it believes they are "experts" on bribery or anything else—are apparently to be directed by Chief Joseph G. Shaw of the Massachusetts District Police.

It is quite fitting that Chief Shaw should be chosen to investigate for the House investigating committee.

It was Chief Shaw, no longer ago than last Summer, who had the murderer John Schidlofski's name in his possession for seven hours before his men went to the address on the slip of paper, and then worked so slowly, so clumsily and so stupidly that Schidlofski escaped and reached La Junta, Colorado, before the BOSTON AMERICAN found him and had him arrested by a local sheriff.

It was the chief of the Massachusetts District Police—the same chief who afterward told how HE had Schidlofski arrested—who, when a reporter for a Boston paper called him up on the telephone one morning and told him it was reported Schidlofski had been caught, said: "You may rest assured that when he IS taken I shall know it first of all. Where is La Junta, anyway?"

This is but one of not a few similar incidents in Massachusetts criminal history.

Chief Shaw, as an individual, is an interesting and amiable old gentleman. As a detective, however—and it is as a detective that he appears in this connection—he is one of the standing jokes of the Commonwealth. This being the case it is eminently appropriate that the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives should refer the investigation of the House scandals to a body of "experts" with Chief Shaw at their head.

The committee, forced to take action unless it was willing to have the facts brought out by District Attorney Moran, started an investigation IN ABSOLUTE SECRECY. The first move was to attempt to gag the press.

It proceeded under a law that renders every member of the House who testified before it immune from prosecution, and then examined every member as speedily as possible. It did this part of its work so well that only ten members remained unquestioned when the immunity that had been granted was discovered.

Now, having rendered its members safe from prosecution, the committee has referred to the Chief of the District Police the duty of securing the evidence that IT ITSELF COULD HAVE SECURED EASILY IN A FAIR, FREE, PUBLIC INVESTIGATION.

It seems as though this engagement of an opera-bouffe detective to discover the bribery facts adds the final touch of absurdity to this "investigation" farce.

If, however, anything more ridiculous can be done, the Committee on Rules can probably be depended upon to do it.

Mr. Regan on Bathing

By J. Frank Davis

"I WAS t' Revere Beach on Decoration Day," said Hanrahan, after he and Mr. Regan had poured the usual libation. "Me an' Coogan tuk in all th' shows an' rode madly on th' merry-go-rounds. We'd've gone in swimmin' but th' wather lukked too cold.

"Twud've lukked good t' th' investigatin' committee at th' State House, thin, said Mr. Regan. "They're dindin' in wather on th' Hill is pretty hot these days."

"We've hurrd about how they gev th' immunity t' th' gang in th' Legislachoor," he continued. "Sure ye have. Everybody has. An' now they're takin' th' wather cure thimselves.

"Is th' doors locked an' th' press properly sagured?" says Jawn Cole, th' chairman. "If so, we'll proceed t' th' adjuldication iv th' bath threatment t' th' committeemin.

"Th' doors is double-barred an' all th' nooseppapers is quiet an' rayspictful; becept two or three," says the outer sentinel. "But bein' th' case, th' proceedin's will proceed," says Jawn. "Who'll be th' furrst t' go in?" says he. "Will he rise?" he says.

"Th' entire assimblage lork t' its feet as wan man. "Ye'll excuse me," says Jawn, "but this is a deliberative body, an' not a political convintion, much as it may raysimble wan. So will raysume yer seats t' wanst an' wate fr th' wather t' hit ye, in th' absince iv a vote I'll take th' cur-furrst, it' be succeeded be thim th't thinks they should."

"I protest again this fav'ritism," says Jawn Cole, claim. Minther Speaker, th't whether Raypublicans or Dimmicrats, we're all equil in th' eyes iv th' law."

"We will be," says Cole, 'afther th' bath. I am now on th' witness echand," says he.

"Attorney-din'ral Malone—there's th' man, Hanrahan. He never answers Jawn Moran. Th' more unanswerable Moran's arguminits is th' less he answers them.

"What's ye're name?" he says t' Jawn Cole. "Ye're Jawn Cole? Are ye a minber iv th' House iv Ripresentatives? Ah ha! Ye admit it, do ye? Did ye ever take (c) ... anything, or offer money t' anywan, or hear anything about anybody doin' aything? Are ye sure? Did ye never hear iv th' overtime bill, or th' bucket shop bill, or th' anti-monopoly bill, or th' aitch' wone gas bill? Have I omitted anny bills th't might be made th' subject iv investigation be this felly—what's his name—Moran? Thank ye. I'll insert it. An' ye know nothin' about anny iv thim tre'pit th't they kem up? Good. I think that'll do."

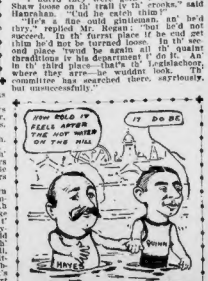
"I'd like t' ax th' witness a question," says Bill Hayes. "Certainly," says Jawn, "only hurry. Fr there's eleven iv us, an' th' Gran' Jury comes in again next week."

"I understand ye run a nooseppaper," says Bill, "I'd like t' ax ye, so th' absence wudden be noticeable, th' same line iv questions we've axed th' other nooseppaper follies we've had up here."

"I'll cheerfully answer thim," says Jawn, "so far as I can, beggin' only t' be excused fr'm th' wan about th' policy iv th' original nooseppaper conducted by Bootenburg, an' th' wan relatin' t' my personal opinion raygardin' th' nebulear hypothesis. Most iv th' others, havin' less t' do wit' th' subject undher discussion, I'm proud t' answer," he says.

"Jawn emerged fr'm th' rack breathless, but white as snow, an' Bill Hayes whit in closely followed be Bill Turtle an' Jawn Quinn.

"Thin th' rest wint undher th' shower, wan be wan, like Noah wint in!" th' ark. "Thin th't knew nothin' answered freely. The others answered as freely as their knowledge wud admit. Whin th' last man had told his story iv what he didn't know th' doors was unbarred."

"I hurrd they were goin' t' turrn Joe Shaw loose on th' trail iv th' crooks," said Hanrahan. "Did he catch thim?"


"He's a fine, cold gintleman, an' he'd thry," replied Mr. Regan; "but he'd not succeed. In th' furrst place if he cud get thim he'd not be turrned loose. In th' second place 'twud be agin all th' quare thraditions iv his department t' do it. An' in th' third place—that's th' Legislachoor, where they are—he wuddint look. Th' committee has searched there, sarriously, but unsuccessfully."
